Losers Dine Winners Of Trap Shoot Match Of Ulster Gun Club

The final string of the January team match of the Ulster County Gun Club was shot off last Saturday at the club traps on the Plank road and the winners and losers dined Thursday night at McCabe's restaurant on Wall street, the winners dining as the guests of the losers. As usual the losers, including several of the best shots of the club, were given a very thorough "kidding" at the hands of the winners, the winning side including some of the poorer shots of the club. This was due to the manner in which Field Captain Toles teamed up the men so as to give each side an equal chance to win the match.

So successful was the last shoot that a similar match has again been agreed upon with pratically all of the shooters who took part in the last match participating and several new faces will be seen on the teams which will compete for honors in a four weeks' shoot commencing a week from this Saturday.

The teams will be realigned by Mr. Toles according to scores made during the recent match so as to make the match an even one. Arrangement of the teams according to past performances gives each man a chance to be on the winning side even though he does not shoot as well as his neighbor.

President Roy M. Sutliff presided at the meeting which followed the dinner and inquired whether the members desired another shoot similar to the last one. The opinion was unanimous showing that Kingston "gunmen" have taken a real interest in trap shooting. With a dinner at stake there is just enough competition to make some of the poorer shots turn in some excellent scores and to cause some of the better shots to become nervous at the wrong time.

At the last shoot there were many new faces each week at the traps. This is the aim of the club, to bring out new members and to get members interested in trap shooting. Anyone who likes to shoot is welcome to join the club and anyone who thinks he would like to shoot will be welcome at the traps any Saturday afternoon to try his hand. Contrary to opinion, it is not necessary to buy an expensive trap gun to shoot. The club will welcome anyone interested in shooting and if you have no gun the club will loan one for the purpose of a trial any Saturday afternoon. Members feel confident that after one trial the beginner will get such a thrill that he will become a steady shooter. Some of the better shots now in the club were not trap shooters when they started out and as one member put it at the dinner, he went hunting and missed so many shots that he decided to practice up at the traps. After a few strings, in which he missed most of his birds, he began to break birds and last night sat with the winners and is one of the "big shots" of the club today.

In the last shoot 29 members shot straight through the match, a record indicating that the sport is popular and provides some thrills.

Saturday there will be a prize handicap shoot at the traps and all members are urged to attend this event. Next Saturday the four weeks team contest will commence. For the prize shoot Saturday the shooter will declare his string on going to the traps rather than select his highest string from the birds shot.

Plans are now under way to make certain improvements to the grounds so that official recognized shoots may be held during the year.

Under the system of scoring used, the man who breaks a moderate number of birds is credited with a certain handicap and stands just as good a chance of being among the winners as the man who shoots nearly a perfect score.

It was decided to continue the "big shot" contest again during the next match. In order that the high scorer as well as the low scorer may have a chance to become a "big-shot" and earn a life membership in the club two "big shots" will be made during the next four-shoot team contest. The man making the highest score during the shoot will become a "big-shot" and win a life membership in the club and also the man who makes the greatest average increase over his score in the last contest will become a "big shot". This will permit some of the new shooters to earn the award.

The traps on the Plank road opposite the old toll-gate are open Saturdays and anyone interested in trap shooting will be welcome. The club invites all shooters to come and bring their gun or if uncertain as to whether you like trap shooting, come and borrow a gun and shoot a string and learn the thrill of trap shooting.

President Sutliff stated that the benefits from the shoots could be noticed and during the last shoot ten new members were added to the club. Secretary Roth gave a financial report showing the club in good financial condition.

Collins Again Arrested.

Daniel Collins, who gave his address as 475 Washington avenue, was released from the county jail Thursday morning, where he had just completed serving a sentence of ten days for disorderly conduct, and was again arrested that afternoon on a charge of public intoxication on Wall street. Collins asked Judge Culloton to give him an opportunity to leave town. He was fined $5 and a jail sentence of 90 days imposed, but the serving of the jail sentence was suspended provided he left town within 24 hours.

Mayor Carey's Condition Is Still Serious

He Has a Crushed Right Shoulder and Injured Right Arm and Three Broken Ribs as Result of Auto Crash on Thursday—Condition Reported as Fair.

Mayor Eugene B. Carey's condition was reported as fair at the Benedictine Hospital, where he was removed by Dr. John F. Larkin on Thursday afternoon following the collision between his automobile and a truck of A. Germano & Son of Poughkeepsie. Dr. Larkin stated that the mayor has a crushed right shoulder, injured right arm and three broken ribs. It is not known definitely as to whether he sustained internal injuries.

Mayor Carey, after having lunch with his mother at her home on Lindsley avenue, had gotten into his car and started over Lindsley avenue on his way to the Strand. At the intersection of East Union street his car was struck almost in the center by a truck driven by Marino Germano, which was proceeding over East Union street toward North street.

The force of the impact was such as to hurl the mayor's car into the garage that stands on the corner of Union and Grove streets, wrecking the door of the garage and damaging one end of the building. The mayor's car after hitting the garage rolled back into a tree. The car is a total wreck. Later in the afternoon it was towed away by one of the board of public works trucks. The front end of the truck that struck the car was also damaged.

Mayor Carey was taken into the home of Thomas McAndrew and Dr. Larkin called, who had the mayor removed to the hospital.

Germano, driver of the truck, was arrested by Policeman William Roedell when he was unable to produce the certificate of registration for the truck. This morning in police court Germano produced the certificate and received a suspended sentence.

Dunnigan Makes His Appointments

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 3 (AP)—Holders of eighteen Senate political appointments distributed by Senate Clerk Patrick H. O'Connell went job hunting today as Democratic Majority Leader John J. Dunnigan sent in his own men to take their places.

Senate job holders for only two weeks, the rejected O'Connell appointees were victims of the Senate patronage dispute which embroiled the strong O'Connell Democratic organization of Albany, Tammany Hall and the forces of state and national Democratic Chairman James A. Farley.

Among those who lost their jobs was James M. Dwyer, Democratic leader of Livingston county, whom O'Connell had made chief engrossing clerk at $2,000 a year.

Most of the others were from Albany or Troy. Among them was Mrs. S. B. Hayward, a veteran Senate employe, for whom Dunnigan promised to find another job. In making his changes, Dunnigan spared two page boys, whose jobs had originally been slated for a change.

Dunnigan ousted the 18 O'Connellites last night, acting less than 24 hours after Governor Lehman signed the bill transferring to the Democratic majority leader from The Bronx the patronage appointive powers which formerly rested with the Senate clerk.

Roosevelt Leaves Cares for Ocean

Warm Springs, Ga., Feb. 3 (AP)—President-elect Roosevelt has fixed his policies and found men to execute them, and tonight heads for sea to enjoy a last vacation before assuming the office of chief executive of the United States.

A solid month of study and review of men has brought Mr. Roosevelt well up to the threshold of his administration and the "new deal" he promised.

The tangled international situation will be the first move of the new Democratic president. He will hear separately the ideas of the European debtors for relief and demand, in return for aid, definite assurance by them of efforts for tariff reform and currency stabilization.

He is prepared to call an extra session of the new Congress if the present "lame duck" meeting fails to finish its job. Farm relief, balancing of the budget, severe economies and government reorganization will be the goal of the extra session.

With his induction to office only a month away, Mr. Roosevelt is holding his shots for the most part. He is not going to make announcement of his cabinet until about March 2. He will announce on March 4 innumerable other appointments to fill existing government vacancies.

Treasury Receipts.

Washington, Feb. 3 (AP)—Treasury receipts for February 1 were $252,-541,899.72; expenditures $147,226,-222.13; balance, $463,644,436.41. Customs duties for February 1 were $486,267.34.

Nine Women Patients Are Burned to Death In Sanitarium Fire

Cleveland, Feb. 3 (AP)—Nine women psychopathic patients who fled in panic before flames that destroyed a dormitory at Ridgecliff Sanitarium in suburban Wickliffe early today were burned to death despite heroic efforts of nurses to rescue them.

All of the bodies had been recovered eight hours after the fire broke out but most were charred beyond recognition.

The ruins were still smouldering when Dr. William Glendenning, husband of the sanitarium's superintendent and a staff physician, branded the fire as of incendiary origin and asked the arrest of a Chardon farmer with whom hospital officials had been in dispute.

He asserted the farmer had threatened his wife with death and yesterday telephoned the institution's office and said: "I'll get even if it kills me."

The bodies of Mrs. Isabel McBride, 60, of New Castle, Pa., and Miss Lorane Dean, 76, of East Cleveland, were identified six hours after the fire was discovered at 1 a. m. Three other bodies remained unidentified.

The shrieks of the terror-stricken women, all suffering from nervous or mental disorders, rent the chill night air as the flames ate rapidly through the frame dwelling. The smoke and heat soon became so intense that entrance to the cottage in which 24 women patients and three sanitarium employes slept became impossible.

When the fire was discovered two nurses, Mrs. Ethel Craig and Miss Florence Farrell, led 17 women from upstairs rooms down the stairs.

They had succeeded in reaching the hallway when tongues of fire ate up through the floor. Several patients, panic-stricken, broke away from the nurses and fled back up the stairs.

Rescuers, working frantically, succeeded in removing others down ladders from second floor windows.

The patients brought outside the dormitory by the nurses showed little concern at their sudden awakening and flight. Attendants said some, once they were taken to nearby dormitories, returned quickly to sanitarium routine, going quietly to bed after first insisting on their usual baths.

BRUTAL KIDNAPER-SLAYER SOUGHT IN GIRL'S MURDER

Mineola, N. Y., Feb. 3 (AP)—"You don't want me to go, do you, mother?" said Mary Helen O'Connor, 15 years old, last Friday as she was about to leave for an overnight visit with a friend.

Her mother replied: "Don't pay any attention to my foolish worries, dear."

But last night James O'Connor stood before a pile of underbrush near Massapequa, looking down on a body, and brokenly he said: "It is my child—Mary Helen."

She had died after a struggle. That much was clear, for her clothing was torn and there were bruises on her body. But it did not appear she had been attacked criminally. Stains found on her clothing are being analyzed. Police thought they might be iodine, or some dark liquid hurled at the girl by a sadist slayer.

An autopsy late last night failed to establish the time of her death. District Attorney Elvin Edwards said it was a "Fair inference that she died the day she left home."

The murder scene is a real estate development, with sidewalks laid but without residences. A workman found the body as he was clearing away brush late yesterday.

A ransom note demanding $1,000 for the girl's safe return was received by O'Connor last night. A thumbprint, plainly marked with a seer, was found on it and is being checked with police fingerprint records.

HOOVER SAYS TAXES A MAZE OF OVERLAPPING

Washington, Feb. 3 (AP)—Declaring that the present system of taxation presented "a perfect maze of overlapping," President Hoover today told the interstate conference of legislators here he had hope that the meeting might help to straighten out this problem.

Leaving the White House shortly before 10 a. m., the President in his brief address before the opening session of the legislators said the problem had arisen through the evolution of governmental functions of municipalities, townships, counties and states.

POUGHKEEPSIE BOY HURT IN FALL DIED THURSDAY

Francis P. Cox, 15, son of Frank P. and Mary Skelly Cox, 4 Woodlawn avenue, Fairview, a freshman at Poughkeepsie High School, died suddenly at St. Francis' Hospital about 6 o'clock Thursday morning of a cerebral hemorrhage resulting from injuries received in a fall outside of the Clinton street high school building Wednesday noon. According to reports, the boy's injuries were received when he fell on the stone sidewalk behind the annex building after having been pushed by a classmate. Both boys were at play, Mrs. Cox said.

Appointed Collector

Washington, Feb. 3 (AP)—Frederick W. Kavanaugh of Waterford, N. Y., was named today by President Hoover to be collector of internal revenue for the 14th district of New York, with headquarters at Albany.

Insurance Companies Pledge Cooperation

Presidents of Six Large Companies Define Their Policies on Mortgage Foreclosures on Homes As Involving As Much Leniency As Possible.

New York, Feb. 3 (AP)—Presidents of six large insurance companies today defined their policies on mortgage foreclosures on homes as involving as much leniency as possible.

L. E. Zacher, president of the Travelers Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn., said: "Our policy as to all mortgage loans is to cooperate to the fullest extent possible in aiding the home owner to retain possession."

"The New York Life Insurance Company," said Thomas A. Buckner, its president, "plans no change in its policy respecting mortgage loans, whether on residences or other properties. Our policy is to deal with each case individually on its merit."

Total farm mortgages in America are estimated at about $9,000,000,-000. Total mortgages on homes approximate $20,000,000,000, although no authoritative estimates are available.

Frederick H. Ecker, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, said: "We announce no new policy regarding farm and city mortgages but continue our long established policy of extending utmost consideration and sympathetic cooperation to our borrowers."

"It is clear," said Edward D. Duffield, president of the Prudential Insurance Company, "that the primary obligation of the Prudential is the protection of the funds entrusted to it by its policyholders.

"Within the limits of this obligation, we will continue to exercise all possible leniency in the endeavor to provide for a continued home and farm ownership."

John R. Hardin, president of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company, said: "It has been and is the policy of this company to extend to mortgagors every possible consideration and resort to foreclosure only when every other recourse is exhausted. This applies to mortgages generally."

Walton L. Crocker, president of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company, stated: "Our traditionally lenient policy and practice have been continued and even greatly liberalized during the existing crisis. Our attitude toward the owner occupant will continue to be lenient as heretofore, as the occasion merits."

D. and H. May Have Aquired Interest As Outlet For Coal

New York, Feb. 3 (AP)—In digging out the reasons for Lenor F. Loree's recent move in having the Delaware & Hudson Co. acquire a 10 per cent interest in New York Central's capital stock, some railroad quarters in Wall Street say he wanted to open new outlets for the D. & H. coal business.

The Delaware & Hudson Co. owns the Delaware & Hudson Railroad Co. and the Hudson Coal Co. Any action that would tend to widen the market and clear the outlets for Hudson Co. coal would be of great benefit to the Loree-controlled enterprises.

"Delaware & Hudson Railroad's coal traffic, which in normal years constitutes about 59 per cent of its total tonnage, flows northward to the New England gateways and to Canadian ports. Closer affiliation with New York Central's lines would considerably widen the available outlets.

Premier Daladier Calls For Action

His ministerial declaration which he read in the chamber and which was read in the senate by a member of the upper house pledged energetically to quiet the country's unrest, put the budget in good shape and participate in the proposed world economic conference.

A possible reference to the debts was contained in discussion of the economic conference, in which France will participate and "whose work is destined to render practicable within the framework of a general adjustment the separate settlement of engagements and disputes born of the war."

France, said the premier, is faced with "material and moral difficulties but no present peril justifies alarm now."

Nevertheless, he said, he deemed it necessary to face conditions "with energy" and to act "with strength and speed."

He avoided discussion of the budget in other details except to promise "substantial economies."

Ambulance Calls Here.

Thursday the ambulance removed Helen Long from the Benedictine Hospital to 51 DeWitt street, and Ada Bachman from 156 Fair street to the Kingston Hospital.

Sandino Pledges to Nicaraguan Peace In Visit to Managua

(Copyright, 1933, by The Associated Press)

Managua, Nicaragua, Feb. 3 (AP)—A promise of peace after six years of revolt against the American-advised government of Nicaragua was left behind today by the colorful General Augusto Sandino as he headed back to the mountain headquarters of his army.

The importance of his message was almost forgotten in the excitement caused by the sensational manner in which he delivered it. His visit was a complete surprise.

A plane from his northern jungle retreat arrived here yesterday with Sandino, his father, and three political allies. With an automatic pistol swinging on his hip, Sandino walked into the presidential palace, sat down with President Juan Bautista Sacasa and made his pledge of peace.

Then the man who had hunted and had been hunted by Nicaraguan native soldiers and American Marines since 1926 enjoyed the luxury, particularly for him, of a night's sleep in the palace.

Enters New Era

"Peace is now a fact. Nicaragua entered a new era when the last United States Marines departed from our soil," he told this correspondent after his conference with the president and other government leaders.

The shrewd general had kept one pledge and government leaders were of the opinion that he would keep this one. He had said often that he would persist in his sanguinary struggle until the last United States Marine had departed from Nicaragua. The Marines, who for the most of 19 years had been stationed in Nicaragua, completed evacuation of the country within two days after the inauguration of President Sacasa, January 1.

Only a few days before the last Marines left, more than 20 were reported slain in an engagement between native guards and Sandinistas. A few isolated engagements since caused considerable doubt whether peace was at hand.

The terms of the peace settlement were not made public.

BUS TERMINAL STILL AT SERVICENTER

The terminal of the Adirondack Stages Short Line, bus is still at the Brown Servicenter despite the rumors which have been circulated recently by the B. S. L. to the effect that the entire organization has been transferred to the Lown Garage on upper Broadway. The bus terminal still remains in the Brown Servicenter as usual with the busses arriving and departing from the place. Tickets are sold as usual there and the waiting room, and same service is still given at the Servicenter on Broadway at Pine Grove avenue.

Recently the Adirondack Stages leased the former Kuhlman garage on upper Broadway as a garage and service station for their stages. Until recently the line operated a garage at Port Ewen for storage and service of the buses. Due to the distance from town the garage here was leased in order to shorten the distance to and from the terminal and cut down the loss of time required to get to and from the service station which was located at the southerly side of Port Ewen village.

Mr. Brown of the Brown Servicenter states that the bus line has a lease for the Servicenter terminal and still is offering the public the same service there as in the past.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 3 (AP)—Prohibition of the use of trucks on state highways between sunset and sunrise, is proposed in a bill introduced in the legislature today by Senator Cosmo A. Cilano, Rochester Republican. The only exception would be trucks transporting milk or agricultural products. In another bill Senator Cilano proposes to bar altogether the use of trailers on state highways.

Committee Suggests $2,123,463 Less to Run Congress During 1933

Washington, Feb. 3 (AP)—Congress learned today that the House Appropriations Committee thinks the legislative establishment can be run for $2,123,463 less in the next fiscal year than the current period.

The committee slashed $[illegible] off the budget estimate for the legislative branch and reported a supply bill cut to $16,588,878 as compared with $18,712,341 for this year.

Continuing the ten per cent cut in salaries of congressmen and senators made effective in the economy act last year, the members were given but $9,000 each in the bill.

That an effort will be made to reduce this amount when the bill is taken up on the House floor is certain.

In all, the Senate with its membership of 96 was given $2,82[illegible] in the bill, while the House, with 435 members, besides delegates and commissioners from the territories and possessions, received a total of $7,-415,399.

A provision was included to limit the official funeral committees to two Senators and two Representatives and excluding payment of relatives' expenses.

For many years the funeral committees ran as high as forty members, but Speaker Garner has reduced the House appointments to such committees to about 15.

No provision is made for an automobile for the next speaker.

The Senate restaurant was given $27,285 but nothing was allotted for the House restaurant. However, $2,500 was included for an oil portrait of Speaker Garner to join those of preceding speakers in the lobby of the House chamber.

Medical supplies amounting to $2,500 were provided for, to be used by Dr. George W. Calver, the attending physician at the capitol, who treats members and their families.

The architect of the capitol, David S. Lynn, received $1,534,715, or $365,865 less than this year, for repairs and maintenance of the buildings, grounds, and for the capitol power plant and garages.

Tariff Debate May Tie Up Senate Action

Washington, Feb. 3 (AP)—A round of debate on the tariff faced the Senate today as it took up the Johnson amendment which would require that the government use strictly American materials and supplies in all public construction and repair.

The amendment was offered by Senator Johnson (R., Cal.) to the Treasury-Postoffice appropriation bill. Indications were that the proposal would be adopted, despite the dispute among Democrats on the advisability of acting against foreign goods.

A vote also is to be had on an amendment by Senator Byrnes (D., S. C.) which would make it still more difficult for Congress to interfere with moves to reorganize the government which are to be undertaken by President-elect Roosevelt.

Byrnes's amendment would require a two-thirds vote of both houses to block a presidential regrouping order.

The House today drove ahead to complete consideration of the billion-dollar independent offices appropriation bill.

Committees on both sides went ahead with hearings on the need for inflation, farm relief and additional federal assistance to the unemployed, but there was no prospect for enactment of any of these proposals before March 4.

Catholic Parties Thrust at Hitler

Berlin, Feb. 3 (AP)—The powerful Catholic parties took their first thrust today at Chancellor Adolf Hitler with the allegation that President Paul von Hindenburg was led into dissolving the Reichstag on the basis of false information that they refused to tolerate the Hitler cabinet.

Monsignor Ludwig Kaas, leader of the Catholic Centrists, in letters of protest to the chancellor and the president, said Hitler's Junker-Nazi coalition cabinet deliberately broke with the Centrists at the height of negotiations, before the dissolution decree was granted by the president.

This charge was echoed in an indignant speech by Dr. Heinrich Held, premier of Bavaria and leader of the Bavarian Populists, the Centrists' allies, at Eichstatt, Bavaria.

It was said in political circles the two Catholic parties planned to give Hitler one year of grace—he asked for four in launching his campaign for the new Reichstag elections March 5. It was believed the alleged disclosures that the president was deceived would bolster the Catholic election front.

WOULD GIVE MEN PREFERENCE OVER MACHINES

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 3 (AP)—Men would be given preference over machines in state work under the provisions of a bill presented in the legislature today by Senator Bert Lord, Chenango county Republican.

Senator Lord proposes to require state contracts to specify that work must be done in the manner which will provide the greatest employment to labor.

Henson Denies He Set Fire to Valley Farm: Saw a Still

His Real Defense Was a Statement That in Basement of Valley Farm Was a Still Disconnected—Says He Was Friendly With Germley Family.

[illegible] Henson, former postmaster at Phoenicia, and for several years station agent and telegraph operator there, took the witness stand Thursday afternoon in his own defense to the charge of arson, third degree, which is being tried in county court before County Judge Frederick G. Traver.

Henson's defense was a complete denial of the setting fire to the Valley Farm owned by [illegible] Germley, above Phoenicia village on March 27 last when the boarding house was destroyed. Henson denied that he had been on the Valley Farm property on the night of the fire or that he was unfriendly with any member of the Germley family. On the contrary he said he was on friendly terms with the member of the family and had never had any trouble which might be considered serious. He said he had had slight arguments at times but they had always parted friends and about a week prior to the fire he was at the Valley Farm with one of the Germleys and at that time they parted the best of friends.

Henson's real defense was a statement that in the basement of the Valley Farm was a still, disconnected, a week prior to the fire and although nothing was said to indicate that this might have been the cause of the fire the only possible reason for introducing that evidence was to lead the jury to believe that perhaps the still was in operation on the night of the fire and might have been the cause.

On the stand Henson appeared nervous and although he answered every question without hesitation he was noticeably bothered and at one time placed his necktie in his mouth and chewed upon it as he was being examined. In his customary, soft southern drawl he replied to the questions as they were asked. His general appearance on the stand was that of an exceptionally well bred and well educated man.

Case Closed Thursday

Henson was the only witness sworn by the defense and after his examination Palmer A. Canfield, Jr., who appeared with M. C. Moseman for the defense, announced that it had been anticipated that The People would take up the afternoon session and witnesses had been subpoenaed by the defense for Friday morning. They had been summoned both as witnesses to the transaction and also as character witnesses but in order to expedite matters the defense would not call them and the case was closed, to be summed up and the charge delivered this morning.

After the noon recess Herbert Segelken, deputy sheriff of Phoenicia, was called by The People. He said he had been in bed on March 27, 1932, when the alarm of fire was sounded. It was about 10 minutes to 12 and he got up and dressed and went to the fire. He said when he arrived at the scene he met William Constable and was given a quart bottle of gasoline. He identified the bottle in evidence as the one to which he attached a tag for identification. Later this bottle was delivered by the district attorney.

He remained at the fire but a few minutes and then went to Woodland Valley Inn gas station where he found Henson and the McGrath boys. Henson was seated at a table. Mr. Segelken said the clothing of James McGrath was dry but the clothing of Henson and Charles McGrath was wet. Henson had his shoes off. His coat and trousers were wet and muddy. After some talk Trooper Metzer arrested Henson and Charles McGrath.

Later Segelken and a detective went to Valley Farm with McGrath, and McGrath pointed out certain things. A broken bottle was found about 20 feet from the rear of the boarding house and near where McGrath said the fire had been set. McGrath also showed the course he and Henson took to enter and leave the premises on March 27. An apple tree was pointed out as the place where Henson lost his hat. At the foot of the tree was a print of a shoe. A plaster cast was made of the print. This cast was produced and offered in evidence.

At the gas station on the night of the fire Mr. Segelken said he took matches from Henson's overcoat pocket. The matches were also offered in evidence.

Segelken said the Woodland Valley Inn gas station sold purple Pan-Am gasoline and it was the only station within a radius of ten miles which at that time sold that gas. He also identified pictures of the Valley Farm after the fire.

Cross examined Mr. Segelken said the foot-print was in the ground and could be easily seen after the snow melted. There was no evidence that the apple trees had been recently pruned. Mr. Henson's shoes which had been offered in evidence were shown the witness and he said that he examined the shoes at the gas station and Henson put them on and wore them to Kingston to jail but later after the foot-print had been discovered in the orchard the shoes were taken and kept as evidence.

After Mr. Segelken's testimony The People rested their case. Mr. Canfield moved to dismiss the indictment

Scale Of Living Fixes Tax Under New Italian System

By ANDREW BERDING

Rome (AP)—A new method of taxation for Italy, whereby a citizen will be assessed not only on the return he makes of income, but also on his scale of living, is about to go into effect here.

The government has designed it to lessen the great disparity existing between income and tax returns. It is estimated that Italians list for taxation only about 25 per cent of their actual incomes.

Opponents Charge Spying

The bill authorizing the new system was passed through parliament after a sharp debate. Members criticized it on the grounds that it meant spying into the private lives of people, and that it was unfair, since it taxed the man who stimulated business by buying and spending, and favored the man who stagnated business by hoarding.

A corps of tax inspectors has been receiving special instructions at the ministry of finance on how to calculate the new tax.

Count Vacation Trips

They will bear in mind the value of the taxpayer's house or apartment, the number of his servants and possession of an automobile, with or without chauffeur.

Also they will note his payments on life insurance, the number and cost of his vacation trips, especially if made abroad; the character of his investments and whether his children attend expensive schools or colleges.

Finally they will consider the frequency of his attendance at theatres, moving pictures and other entertainments.

Seek Fair Returns

The inspectors have been strictly warned that they must make their investigations "with extreme moderation and caution, avoiding molesting the contributors and their families, and proceeding only when an evident and noticeable disproportion exists between the return of income made by the contributor and his tenor of life."

The inspectors have been instructed also to take into consideration mitigating circumstances, such as a large house or apartment being required because of a large family; numerous servants because of a large family or illness in the household and similar factors.

The government hopes for two results from the new taxation. They want taxpayers to make fairer returns on income and they hope also to eliminate the deficit in the budget, estimated at $150,000,000 for the forthcoming fiscal year.

Accept Pastor's Resignation.

Saugerties, Feb. 3.—The resignation of the Rev. S. M. Mountz as pastor of the West Camp Lutheran Church, has been accepted by the congregation and on February 26 Mr. and Mrs. Mountz will go to Pennsylvania, where they will make their home.

Saugerties Dog Population

Saugerties, Feb. 3—The dog population of the township of Saugerties has been reported as 1,183, which includes 1,025 dogs and 158 pups. The town clerk has issued only 619 licenses for 1933 and a large number of dogs are still unlicensed to date.

It's the easiest thing in the world to see why Feen-a-mint is such an all-round satisfactory laxative. It's so pleasant to take, for one thing. Just a delicious piece of gum that even children like. And the very fact that you chew it makes all the laxative work every time. That makes it thorough yet gentle in action because the laxative is evenly distributed throughout the digestive tract. Safe, non-habit-forming, economical. At all druggists.

CALLED FOR MINISTER BEFORE HE DIED

Ossining, N. Y., Feb. 3 (AP).—"I'm not afraid to burn," boasted William Turner, called "Three-Gun" Turner.

But yesterday, a few hours before he was to die for doing murder in a New York speakeasy, his mother talked to him. When he persisted in his declaration of atheism she turned away, saying:

"Then you must go to perdition. But you will never meet me there."

The condemned man sobbed and called for a clergyman.

At 11:04 p. m. he entered the execution chamber of Sing Sing prison. At 11:06 p. m. he was dead.

ROSENDALE GRANGE WILL MEET ON FEBRUARY 16.

Rosendale, Feb. 3.—On January [illegible] Rosendale Grange resumed its yearly lecturer's program. An old fashioned musical was featured for the evening. Poems and musical events were read by Jeannette Conklin, Mrs. Elizabeth Kussom and Mrs. George Coutant. Several old melodies were sung by the Grange. The men's quartet, consisting of Fred Kertens, Grover Dunn, Stephen Huber and Dominick Christiana, with Miss Gladys Christiana as pianist, sang "Swing Low." The program closed with several groups singing old songs and Floyd Dietz played the accordion for a number of musical games and stunts.

On February 16, when the next regular meeting will be held, the name of the program will be "Our Yesterdays." Alan McKenzie, well known historian of Ulster county, has written a paper on the first schools of Rosendale and George Kennedy will present an old time melodrama which promises to be a thriller.

The host and hostess for the evening are Mr. and Mrs. C. J. LeFever, Jr., assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hirzel, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Yunker, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Brodsky, Carrie Brodsky and Edward Pogey.

Lights of NEW YORK

By WALTER TRUMBULL

Capt. Ashley McKinley has been telling me of the eventful voyage made by the Eleanor Bolling, one of the ships of the Byrd expedition, from New York to Little America. It seems that the entire crew, with the exception of Captain Brown, the first mate and the chief engineer, were strictly volunteers, all being members of the exploring party. One or two of them may have had active experience in a rowboat or even have sailed a catboat, but none had really done anything to impair his standing as an amateur. Dr. Lawrence M. Gould was second mate, because of his position as second in command to Admiral Byrd and because he was able to use a sextant. When he was not seasick, he was a very valuable second mate.

* * *

The ship got out of New York harbor all right, with the captain on the bridge, the first mate at the wheel, and the chief engineer dashing back and forth between the engine room and the stokehold. One of the volunteer stokers had once had some experience with an oil furnace in a suburban cottage, but the other had never done more than turn a radiator on and off. The Eleanor Bolling burned coal. By frenzied effort the two were able, while they lasted, to get up at least 25 pounds of steam.

* * *

This had a bearing on something which happened off Atlantic City. There a revenue cutter took the ship for a rum runner, in spite of the "Byrd Expedition," painted plainly in various places, and signaled her to stop. Captain Brown was highly indignant and whether he would have stopped or not is somewhat of a question, but some one pulled the whistle cord, the whistle jammed and blew for about a minute and a half, and the ship came to rest of her own accord. All the steam was exhausted. When the revenue men came aboard they were welcomed by the officers with strong language and by the crew with loaded cameras. They were a sheepish looking lot.

* * *

Naturally, the mate couldn't spend all his time at the wheel and when he was relieved by the first volunteer, strange things happened. The ship began to do a sort of combination tango and barrel roll. Uttering loud supplications to all the gods of mariners, the captain reeled his way on deck. When he spoke feelingly to the helmsman, the latter was both astonished and hurt.

"Why, captain," he protested, "she never was more than 6 inches off her course," meaning 6 inches on the compass card.

Owing to a few such trifling incidents, the ship, which had been due to reach Norfolk early on Tuesday, did not arrive until Wednesday afternoon. This was a bit alarming to relatives of the crew who had gone there to meet her, especially as some of the papers carried headlines saying that the ship was overdue and probably had sunk. But with the mate again at the wheel, she came into harbor nobly.

* * *

Meanwhile, the first volunteer stokers had given their best and their all. They were tenderly laid in bunks and Captain McKinley and the doctor took over the stoking job. They stoked a large part of the way to New Zealand. They did well and would have done even better, if the furnace doors had not formed a habit of swinging shut just when they wanted to throw coal in. Pair by pair, the huskiest of the volunteers took their turn in the stokehold, but the steam gage remained at about the same point. At New Zealand a couple of Scandinavian professionals were signed. From the time they took over, it was possible at all times to blow the whistle without stopping the ship. They weighed about 250 pounds each.

* * *

Entering the New Zealand harbor, Captain McKinley had been promoted to the wheel. If the ship had been an airplane or a dirigible, he would have been an expert pilot. As it was, a small misunderstanding arose between him and the captain.

* * *

"Port," ordered the latter, meaning apparently that he wanted the wheel turned to port. But Ashley McKinley naturally thought he was referring to the ship. The captain was so surprised at the result of his command that the ship, like a cat chasing its tail, made practically a complete circle to port before he recovered his power of speech. But by the time the Eleanor Bolling reached Little America everyone, including the captain, first mate and chief engineer, had obtained a lot of experience and all were able seamen.

Minnows Make This Man Independently Wealthy

Port Huron, Mich.—When Charles U. Day sold a 14-quart pail of minnows for $1 some 30 years ago, he unconsciously founded a business that was to make him independently wealthy within three decades.

From his start with a pail of minnows, Day developed the idea of selling bait to reap a profit of $51,000 last year. He supplies fresh or "canned" minnows, grasshoppers, crawfish, angleworms, salmon eggs and pork rind to sporting goods stores in every section of the country.

Macy Accepts Butler Resignation

New York, Feb. 3 (AP)—Republican State Chairman W. Kingsland Macy today sent to Miss Sarah Butler a letter accepting "with regret" her resignation as vice chairman and observing that they had apparently misunderstood each other.

Miss Butler resigned last night, writing Macy she could not accept his "theory that neither I nor the women of the Republican party have the right to express a frank opinion as to the person we consider best qualified to succeed me."

Miss Butler and many of the [illegible] party leaders were said to have desired that Mrs. Rosalie Loew Whitney of Brooklyn be made vice chairman. Instead, Macy last night appointed Miss Lillian Gartlan of Queens.

Miss Butler, who is to be married late in April to Capt. Neville Lawrence of London, England, had agreed to remain as vice chairman through the present session of the legislature.

In her letter to Macy last night she demanded that her resignation be made effective at once and remarked that, although he had asked her opinion as to who should be her successor, Macy had apparently "bitterly resented" her suggestion and that

HOME LOAN BANK LIMITS.

As regards the Home Loan Bank, "hope deferred maketh the heart sick." It was not fair, perhaps, to expect immediate action. The installation of such a financial system requires time. Officials expect to have it pretty well under way in the spring. But explanations of its scope and functions disappoint many people. The head of a large building association league says:

> Funds from the Home Loan Bank have little or no effect on liquidity of savings and loan companies so far as paying depositors are concerned. Such funds will be used for the most part in making loans to put men to work.
> It is likewise wrong to say that the Home Loan Bank will stop foreclosures or give relief to the home owner who is unable to meet interest and principal payments. It was not intended as an emergency relief measure.

When and how, then, is emergency relief going to be obtained for the vast and swelling army of distressed bank depositors and property owners? It is fine that there is to be more money available for new construction. But why, with all the financial resources that may be tapped by the federal and state governments, is there no credit provided for the honest people who have homes already built which they are in danger of losing? And who will buy new homes if people cannot get their frozen money out of the banks, or if present owners cannot save the old homes by refinancing?

WAR DEBT PARADE.

Our foreign war debtors are coming to Washington in a procession. First in order, and in welcome, is Great Britain, which has the cleanest record of all our debtors and which therefore may expect most consideration. After her will come the others who have paid when it hurt. And then, bringing up in the rear, France and the other defaulters.

It is an unpleasant job that Uncle Sam has cut out for him, but apparently a necessary one, and the nations may all feel better when it's over. Uncle, on the face of things, stands to lose quite a few billion dollars on top of what he has lost already in his war and post-war experience. This loss, however, will be mainly or entirely a matter of bookkeeping. It does not look as if the war debtors could be made to pay any more on the present plan, no matter what attitude our government might take.

With skillful negotiation, we may get more out of those bad accounts by concessions than by threats or reprisals. We may be able to get some money, possibly a billion or more, by way of settlement in full through bond issues, as the Allies themselves arranged to do with Germany at Lausanne last year. Washington would fulfill Lausanne. We might get more important benefits in the way of tariff concessions, armament reductions and sound money agreements.

WHO SHALL GOVERN?

Says Prof. Walter Rautenstrauch of Columbia, who has officially repudiated Technocrats but continues their work under a different name: "Technocracy has been represented as intending to bring about a government by engineers. That would be a sad state of affairs—just as sad as now, when everything is run by lawyers. Sixty per cent of the members of Congress are lawyers." The professor can be forgiven for his sarcasm. Unquestionably we are governed too much by lawyers. But if we are asked whether we prefer government by lawyers or engineers, the answer is "neither." Nor do we hanker for government by economists or sociologists or financiers or manufacturers or merchants or writers.

Ideal government, if there is such a thing, would be government by none of these separately, but by all of them together. It would be under the direction of men not belonging to any of these classes, but to a distinct class of its own. Give us statesmen, broad and intelligent enough to understand the specialists, to listen to them and then tell them what to do.

MIDGET JURIES.

The Anglo-Saxon jury is an old and sacred institution, yet subject to change. Cuyahoga county, Ohio, has been experimenting with "six-man" juries, and is pleased with the results. It finds them both economical and efficient. The innovation was adopted to save money. It is evident that six jurors cost only half as much as twelve, if "overhead" is ignored. The county has saved thousands of dollars in this way.

Court business has been expedited. It is easier to pick an acceptable jury of half a dozen than to find a dozen that both sides are satisfied with. It is easier to get intelligent men and women for the job, and it is easier for them to agree on a verdict. A jury becomes a little less like a public meeting and a little more like a business committee. Lawyers observing the experiment say it would save hundreds of millions a year if the plan were adopted nationally. Efficiency in the administration of justice, however, is a better argument than mere salary-saving.

THE SLOW CHILD

It would be very interesting and gratifying to us who vividly remember our school days if we were to visit the schools of today.

You may remember in the old days that there were two or three bright boys and girls in the class, a large number who were of average ability, and two or three who were called dunces because they were always at the foot of the foot of the class.

What do we find now?

There are still the bright few, and also the large number of average ability, but very few if any "dunces" in the room.

The authorities now sift out all these "slow" ones, and find that some of them are slow because of poor eyesight, poor hearing, lack of sleep, or other causes, and measures are taken to correct these defects or bad habits.

With those who are slow naturally special classes are now arranged, and these pupils find themselves in a class, or getting individual instruction, where they are not made to feel ashamed, but are encouraged to do their very best.

Many of these slow students, by these methods, become very useful members of the community, making their own way, and never become a public charge.

However, another very interesting thing has occurred. Just as there were slow boys and girls in the class, so also were there "bad" boys and girls, who continually got into trouble, were made to stand in the corner, were strapped, were suspended from school, or sent home with notes telling the parents of their misconduct.

Educators are finding that these youngsters who misbehave have to be separated from the class temporarily and an endeavor made to learn just why they misbehave, why they can't get along with the other youngsters, or with the teacher.

"This youngster comes to school with the results of his home training—fears, dislikes, temper tantrums, and self pity. He comes into contact with new authority and a new set of companions. If he doesn't fit into the school life he becomes a disturbing factor in the class room or playground."

Therefore the home life of the child is now investigated, the parents kindly but firmly made to understand why the boy and girl is having trouble at school and the possibility of their youngster later becoming a problem for the community to deal with.

TWENTY AND TEN YEARS AGO.

Feb. 3, 1913—Mrs. Abram Elmendorf burned to death at her home on Pine street.

Isaac W. Weiner leased the Colonial Hotel, Broadway and Dederick street.

Work of selecting a jury to try Frank M. Boyce, Jr., former city treasurer, taken up in court here.

Feb. 3, 1923—Barn and garage of Pinkus Weiner on Ann street and brick garage of James F. Dwyer on Broadway, badly damaged when weight of snow caused roofs to collapse.

Road conditions by reason of snow were still so bad that the highway to Phoenicia was not being used for motor vehicle travel, and the passenger auto busses were not operating.

Mrs. Pearl Smith of Newburgh and Albert R. Coy of Modena married at Modena.

Ridgeway Le Fever, a well known decorator, died at his home on Washington avenue.

$ Buying Barbara

by Julia Cleft-Addams ● Author of "[illegible]"

SYNOPSIS: Swiftly it comes out that although Sir James Cane has cheated Barbara Quentin of her inheritance, both Mrs. Lodely, friend of Barbara, and Leila Cane, Sir James' daughter, have known the facts for some time. Mrs. Lodely wanted to marry her gifted but cruel artist son Mark to Barbara; Leila in desperation used her knowledge to blackmail her father. Farrell Armitage makes the revelations, and he loves Barbara. Farrell's secretary, Kenneth Poole, follows Leila, and proposes.

Chapter 47

ONE EMERALD LESS

"I DON'T think that's a graceful way of referring to a proposal of marriage."

"Then I'll put it this way—that I tried to marry Mark for love and I tried to marry Farrell for money and both of 'em turned me down. I won't marry anyone else just to save my face."

"Here's the river."

They crossed the wide, shining ribbon of the Embankment and came up to the parapet. She opened her hand and flung Mark's emerald out into the dark. For a second the gleam of a street-lamp caught it and it rayed up, wickedly green. Then it was gone. Poole's shoulder touched hers.

"I wish you'd send your ring the same way. The ring you wear on your left hand. I've never liked it."

She flung Mark's emerald into the dark.

"Better return that to father. He gave it to me, and he'll need every penny." She leaned heavily against his shoulder, feeling the strength melt from her limbs. "Just a minute and then I must go and pack for Kings Mallard. I wonder how he'll take it? Do you think that in our common bereavement father and I will learn to understand each other better?"

"No. Besides, you won't have enough time. We sail on the twenty-third for the Cape. I'm taking over permanent management of one of Armitage's concerns out there."

"Thanks, all the same, but any sailing I do will be with father and mother."

"Do you honestly care a lot for Lodely?" he asked. "I mean, isn't he sort of a—an obsession?"

"I don't think so. I'm not like Barbara!"

"Well, only because she'd signed on with him before you got there, as I understand it. If she can consider Farrell, why can't you consider me?"

"You utter goat, there's no comparison!"

"Don't be impertinent! I'm as good a man as Armitage. Ask him."

"Ah, but I'm not as good as Barbara."

"I've heard a lot about Barbara Quentin and she may be as wonderful as you all say. I don't doubt it. But what you did just now takes a lot of beating—to stand up and chuck a vote of thanks back because you haven't deserved it. If you'd shut up, no one would ever have known."

"There is someone who would have known; knows already. Mr. Frere."

"Who's he?"

"He's a clergyman. He's almost my only friend. I told him about those shares once and asked him what I ought to do."

"And what was his advice?"

"He said if I needed advice on a matter like that I wasn't likely to take it anyway."

"Shrewd old boy! Now, look here, I'll make you a fair offer. Will you [illegible] marries Barbara Quentin?"

"No, because," her voice failed her and she had to start again. "Because in one way—not in Barbara's way, but in a small-town-conventional-Kings-Mallard way, I am bound to Mark."

"But if that doesn't mean anything?" he offered at last. "To me, I mean, or to you?"

"Ah, but I'm beginning to know that it does mean something to me. So I think it would be a good idea if we said goodbye now, don't you?"

"Must we, Leila?"

"I think so, Ken. I'll always wish you 'good meal-times.' Goodbye."

"All right. If you say so. Goodbye."

• • • • • • •

The announcement as it appeared in the social columns was simple. A marriage, said the column, had been arranged between Miss Barbara Quentin and Mr. Mark Lodely.

Mr. Mark Lodely was, of course, the brilliant portrait painter who by his portrait of Sir Robert Phillay had caught the serious attention of the critics, and by his portrait of Miss Patsy Raoul, the most daring diseuse on today's stage, had forced the man in the street to stop and stare, and smile.

Miss Quentin was, of course, known to an exclusive circle as a decorator and designer. Her successful treatment of Miss Patsy Raoul's house had laid the cornerstone of her reputation and her partnership with the renowned Jacques Malavie, Ltd., had carried her to further successes.

Leila Cane read the news in the modest London flat which was now her parents' home.

"Mark and Barbara are going to be married, mother."

"Well, my dear, they've been engaged long enough, I'm sure. And they can well afford a beautiful home together now. Why, they could buy South-the-Water if they wanted it! It's a shame!"

"Don't you realise, mother, that if it hadn't been for Barbara's insane generosity we shouldn't have even this flat; we should have to sit about in fourth-rate continental pensions for the rest of our lives?"

Leila gave it up. Her mother had retired to bed on arrival from Kings Mallard and although she was not exactly ill, she was not well and Leila did not expect her to recover. The mouse had taken refuge in the nearest hole and would venture out no more.

Leila took her paper along to the sitting-room where her father was finishing a heavy breakfast. In spite of herself she had an admiration for him. When, a few months earlier she had brought him Barbara's decision (that she wished the money divided between the Lodelys, the Canes and herself) he had done no more than chirp brightly—"Indeed! Yes. I expected no less. No doubt it is what poor Quentin would have wished."

Although it was making her late for the position Barbara had got her with Malavie, Leila waited until her father finished his final cup of coffee.

"Barbara and Mark are going to be married, father."

"Really? Well, it's been a long engagement," the old man said quietly.

Still another suitor enters the lists, tomorrow, for Barbara's hand.

ULSTER PARK MAN WINNER IN PINE CONE GUESSING

The Conservation Department conducted a pine cone guessing contest in connection with their Reforesting Exhibit which was displayed at the New York State Horticultural Show at the Old Armory Building, Kingston, last week.

There was a total of 1,566 pine cones in the pile and the nearest to the correct guess was submitted by Norman Miles, Ulster Park, N. Y., who guessed 1,588, according to George E. Stevens, Supervisor of Forestry Exhibits of the Department, who had charge of the Exhibit. Mr. Miles will receive the prize of 1,000 forest tree seedlings provided he will plant the trees or have them planted in order to establish a forest, says Mr. Stevens.

There was a total of 473 guesses made at the contest, representing people from over 74 different towns and 2 towns out of state. A large number of Kingston people also submitted guesses. The guesses ranged from 125 to 17,400 cones. The average guesses were around 800. The contestants showed a great deal of enthusiasm and interest in the contest.

Lawrence of Arabia, famed for his leadership in the Arabian revolt during the World War, showed almost incredible ability to memorize when—because the original manuscript was stolen—he wrote two-thirds of his "Seven Pillars of Wisdom" from memory. He rewrote all of the missing manuscript in three months and on one day wrote 34,000 words from sunrise to sunset.

The first two-thirds of the manuscript was written in Paris, and later stolen from a railway station at Reading. The "Seven Pillars of Wisdom" was the story of the Arabian revolt, printed in a limited edition. An abridged version, "Revolt in the Desert," was written from it.

Although "tenor" is almost universally applied to indicate a high tone in musical instruments, the opposite is true in a set of bells. The bell with the highest pitch is the "treble" and the one with the lowest tone is the "tenor." An explanation of this, accepted by some authorities and questioned by others, is that in a set of 10 bells, the largest—hence, lowest—was called the "tenth" or, later, the "tenor."

Vicks Chemists Invite Tests of New Antiseptic

The makers of Vicks VapoRub have now produced an oral antiseptic. It is called Vicks Voratone Antiseptic. They urge every user of a mouth-wash and gargle—for halitosis (impure breath), oral cleanliness, and other uses—to test Vicks Antiseptic and get personally acquainted with its quality and its economy.

Born in a depression year Vicks Antiseptic is priced accordingly. The regular size is a large 16-ounce bottle—a usual 75c value—for only 35c. For your testing, Kingston druggists are offering a special trial size. This is a 25c value, but is priced at only 10c—while the supply lasts.

A QUICK, SURE WAY TO RELIEVE COUGHS AND HOARSENESS

No matter whether your cough is just an irritating tickle, or a hard stubborn nerve-racking bark you can relieve it instantly with this new quick-acting preparation—STOP KOF.

The formula of this astonishingly effective remedy represents the active constitutents of white pine, wild cherry, balm-of-gilead buds, blood root, sassafras, yerba santa and eucalyptus compounded into a syrup with sugar and honey.

STOP KOF acts instantly to loosen the germ-laden phlegm and clear the congested air passages, at the same time soothing the inflamed membranes in the throat. It is pleasant-tasting—children like it—and it is entirely harmless and free from narcotics. It won't upset the stomach or nauseate.

You have no idea how quickly and surely coughs due to colds and hoarseness are relieved after taking a spoonful or two of STOP KOF. Get a bottle today at your druggist and see for yourself how effective it is.

If Your Ears Ring With Head Noises

People who are growing hard of hearing and who experience a stuffy feeling of pressure against their ear drums, accompanied by buzzing, rumbling sounds in the head like water falling or steam escaping, should take prompt and effective measures to stop this trouble.

Secure from McBride Drug Stores or your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home and add ¼ pint hot water and a little sugar.

One tablespoonful four times a day should quickly relieve distressing catarrhal head noises, open clogged nostrils, make breathing easy, stop annoying mucous discharge. All catarrh sufferers should give Parmint a trial.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press.)

When five gunmen hijacked a truck loaded with butter near here last night, they were quite philosophical about their error.

"We expected a load of alcohol," said one of them to Homer Shaffer, driver of the truck, "but I guess we'll have to take the butter and sell it."

The truck was found later in Cicero. There was not a pound left of the original load of eight tons of butter.

Fireman Likes Alarms.

Minneapolis—The street car motorman may go for a car ride on his day off, the letter carrier may go for a walk, but when the fireman turns in false alarms while otherwise unoccupied, that's something.

Ralph Lawrence, substitute fireman, in police court admitted yesterday sending in 15 false alarms in a four hour period.

He was sentenced to 30 days in the work house.

They Ride Band Wagon.

Elkhorn, Wis.—Democrats of three Walworth county communities are trying to figure out how to compete with "job seekers." In Delavan there are seven "Democrats" seeking the postmastership while only six Democratic votes were cast in the 1930 state election. In East Troy only two Democrats voted and three have applied for the job. The situation at Williams Bay also is embarrassing insofar as no Democratic vote was cast there in 1930 and one man has applied for the postmastership.

Try Ironwood.

Seattle—Capt. Lindley Davis is looking for a knotty piece of timber, at least 1½ feet through and eight feet long. He says his partner in a towboat firm, George R. Cary, is too much of a whittler.

In their 29 years at one office, Davis declares, Cary has whittled through three thick planks on the office rail.

Barber Snips Costs.

Reading, Pa.—Berks county's model prison goes in for too much hair-cutting to suit the country's hobbies. Officials disclosed that a recent requirement that prisoners have their hair clipped has cut the number of voluntary inmates in half and saved the county a tidy sum.

Preach and Practice.

Hartford, Mich.—The Packard Church carries its theories into practice.

When two deacons delegated to stand watch and discover the thieves who had been stealing gasoline from the worshippers' autos captured two 18 year old boys, they took them inside the church where services were under way.

The culprits were led down to the front pew. A prayer was given for their reformation. They left the church with bowed heads.

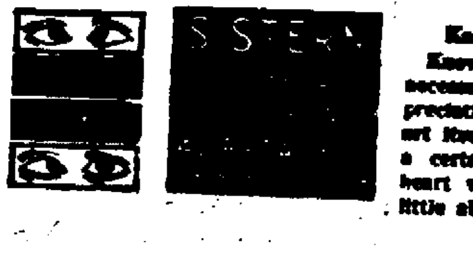
Goes for Ride.

Chicago—Eugene Romeo lost control of his car when sideswiped by another machine, ran over the curb, and made some effective changes in the front yards of several residences. He knocked down a tree, a porch, a section of a fence and removed a stairway. The car? Two flat tires and a scratch or two.

"Law this Way."

Milwaukee — Arriving with a search warrant for an alleged liquor resort, prohibition agents found a sign, "Moved next door." An arrow served as further guide.

They followed directions and arrested Loretta White and Lucille Wilson.



Howe About:

Giving Good Advice
War
Those Who Paid

By ED HOWE

NEW York people have laughed at us farmers a long time because of our mortgages. O. O. McIntyre, a farmer from Missouri, is now in New York, looking up the records there, and has discovered so far that every building on Fifth avenue is mortgaged, except St. Patrick's cathedral and Tiffany's jewelry store.

The only rich man I know now recently called on me; he used to work in my shop for eight dollars a week, and I recall thinking occasionally it was too much. He is at present getting fifty dollars a week in the mechanical department of a big town newspaper.

His aim in calling on me was to get help in saving his little home. A building association has a small mortgage on it, and it obligates my friend to pay thirty dollars a month through a term of years, such payment to include his rent and a gradual reduction of the principal sum.

"Joe, I have long known you to be a good worker and an honest man," I said to him. "Do you mean to tell me that with wages of fifty dollars a week continuing over eight years, you have not been able to pay thirty dollars a month rent, when this sum included six dollars to apply on your mortgage?"

He thought awhile before answering, as men do when stumped, and I noticed that look of despair I have so often seen lately on the faces of other good men and good fellows.

"Well," he answered finally, "I didn't."

Many a good man has made the same reply, when he knew he was to blame; I have been guilty so often myself I hadn't the heart to say anything further, although I did ask him if he had never heard of the old advice to steadily save something for a rainy day.

"Yes," he replied. "I was brought up on it; mother always fussed at father about that, and I buried him."

It's another American tragedy; I don't know what to do about it.

There was excuse after excuse in this good man's case; for one thing, he had four daughters, and loved them devotedly, for they were good girls, and three of them married shiftless husbands. Still, excuses are usually urged for neglected duty; some of them are eloquent, and true enough, but they don't count much when a mortgage is due.

* * *

I have often wondered what would have happened had Woodrow Wilson been a brave and true man before he entered the World war, and said: "We have not sufficient cause to engage in this conflict, which will cost us billions in money, and hundreds of thousands of tragical deaths. There has been popular expression on the question; the people elected me President because I kept them out of it. I will resign, but I will not enter the war in response to clamor of a mistaken minority."

Probably there would have been so much indignation from the mistaken that Mr. Wilson would have resigned: probably his successor would have plunged in.

But today Woodrow Wilson's memory would have been blessed by the majority as the memory of no President has been blessed in the history of the Republic.

In the early sixties Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, while sitting in his home in Boston, received a telegram saying his son had been shot through the neck at the battle of Antietam. The distressed father at once started for the battlefield.

The Atlantic reprints an account of the journey Doctor Holmes wrote while its events were fresh in his memory, and the horrors of war have never been more powerfully depicted. He walked through many hospitals looking for his son; inspected many wagons carrying dead and wounded; talked with soldiers who had buried unknown dead in long trenches like cattle; met other frantic fathers who were looking for dead or mangled sons; saw the wreck of the battlefield; heard the screams of wounded; wept at sight of thousands of good-looking boy soldiers horribly mangled.

All through my reading of the story I kept thinking. And the people who fought and paid for the war never wanted it, never asked for it; it was ordered by a few men who never suffered: some of whom profited by the carnage. Out of this unnecessary fighting came Abraham Lincoln, who was never in a battle, lost no sons; Lincoln as President issued the first call for troops.

* * *

Probably no man ever had a friend he did not hate a little; we are all so constituted by nature no one can possibly entirely approve of us.

* * *

I greatly admire the better class scientists, for this reason: There is no such thing as a first-class man of science who wishes to fool anyone; his ambition is to learn, and, through learning, make life more endurable. These men are the one class who always wish to tell the truth; who always believe honesty is the best policy. Statesmen, writers, doctors, preachers, lawyers, business men, occasionally wish to fool us, but the scientists never do; honesty is their trade.

Knowledge and Appreciation

Knowledge and appreciation are not necessarily the same. The art of appreciation goes side by side with an art itself; it demands open eyes and a certain goodness or rightness of heart which knowledge often knows little about.

Rice Will Speak To Youth Council

WILLARD E. RICE

Willard E. Rice, general secretary of the New York State Christian Endeavor Union will be in Kingston Sunday afternoon as the guest of the Kingston Youth Council, and will address the Youth Assembly to be held at the First Baptist Church at 3:30. All are cordially invited to attend.

Mr. Rice has been general secretary of the New York State Christian Endeavor movement since the fall of 1928. He is a native of Buffalo, and was educated at Colgate University.

Shortly after his graduation from Colgate he became executive and field secretary for Christian Endeavor in the states of Maryland, Delaware, and West Virginia. He was called from this work to return to his home state as leader in the field and in administration of the Empire State Youth Program. In the southern work and in this state, Mr. Rice has made splendid records. He is loved and respected by all who know him.

During his university days and since, Mr. Rice has excelled in public speaking. He was leader of the debate team which contested with Cambridge University and prominent American colleges. He is widely used as speaker, conference leader, organizer, and counselor.

This is the first interdenominational rally to be held by the local council this year, and sponsors hope that representatives of all sects, will be present. The service will start promptly at 3:30, and will include many special and unusual musical events. Invitations have been extended the members of all local congregations to attend this service.

HIGH FALLS FIRE COMPANY SUPPER GREAT SUCCESS

High Falls, Feb. 3.—The first great social event to be jotted down on the calendar of the new year was the High Falls Fire Company supper, which took place on Tuesday evening, January 31, in the basement of the Reformed Church. A roast pork supper was served at six o'clock. Before the appointed hour for serving the people started coming and they kept right on coming. Every available seat at the four long tables was taken, the vacant benches filled with those waiting to be served, and a crowd standing.

The waiters were simply rushed and had great difficulty in getting through the crowd to serve while the chefs and assistant helpers were sure kept on the jump. The waiters as well as those in the kitchen were right on the job every minute. The people had good service and they did not have to wait long for it either, but they did have to wait for a seat at the tables.

Most every family in the place was there or represented by some of the members, and there were outside guests present from The Clove, Stone Ridge, Rosendale, Kingston and Ellenville.

At this large gathering all classes mingled, the feeling of good fellowship prevailed and every one was ready to give the other fellow a hearty welcome.

When the firemen give another supper, and they surely will after this great success, they will have more provisions on hand and be ready for a large crowd. Before they were finished serving, they ran out of food and had to send out for more supplies.

Chief Fireman Murphy of Kingston was to have delivered an address, but was unable to be present on account of severe illness.

There were over 250 tickets sold and there were some who paid at the door, so even after all expenses are paid they will clear a goodly sum.

All take off their hats to the men who turned in and worked at the supper. The firemen wish to thank those who baked or in any way helped the good cause along. A good supper, a good crowd, good service and a good amount was cleared. The Fire Company has a good right to be proud of their first achievement.

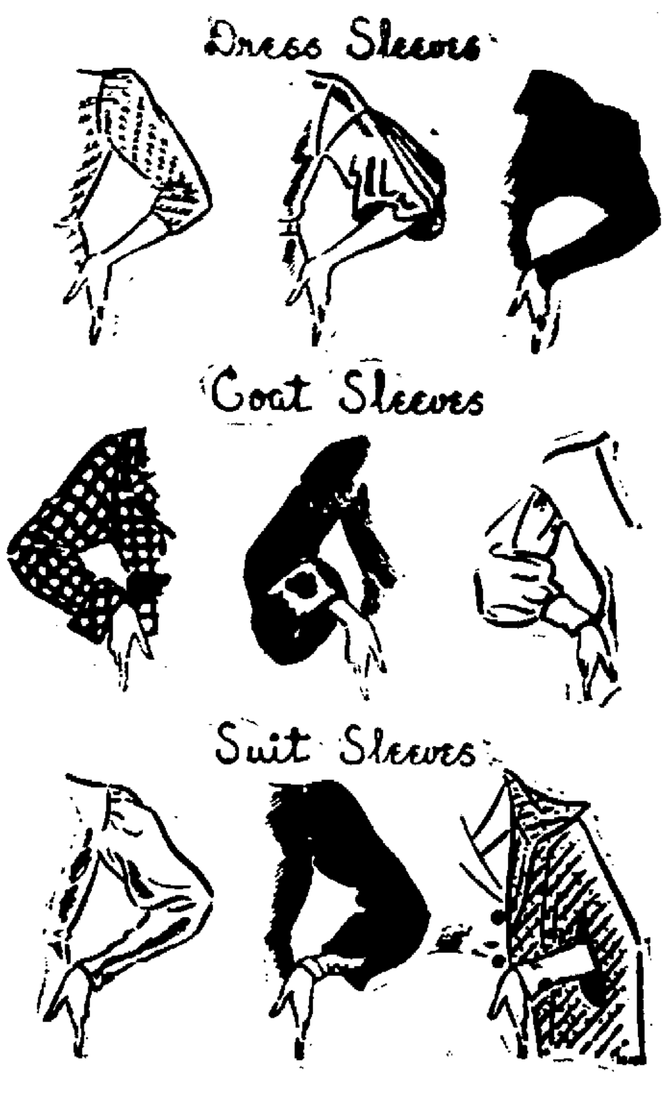
Spring Sleeve Suggestions



Copyright, 1933, by Fairchild

The nine types of sleeves sketched above appears frequently in resort costume collections and have been seen in the few costume types which suggest their suitability for carrying over into the spring.

One thing that stands out in this group is the definite feeling for shorter sleeves, with two out of three dress sleeves showing this, one each of the coat and the suit sleeves.

Flattering Fashions Reappear

New York—How to be covered and uncovered at the same time, is the problem confronting designers of women's clothes. It's smart to be entirely covered, but it's smarter to have tricky little neck and arm exposures here and there. As, for instance, in the sleeve sketched, which is really much more formal than it would have been if the happy idea of the great divide had not been introduced.

Sleeves falling in graceful folds from the shoulder are charming in sheer fabrics. As every one knows, or should know, the sheers have it just now for after-six occasions and for late afternoon.

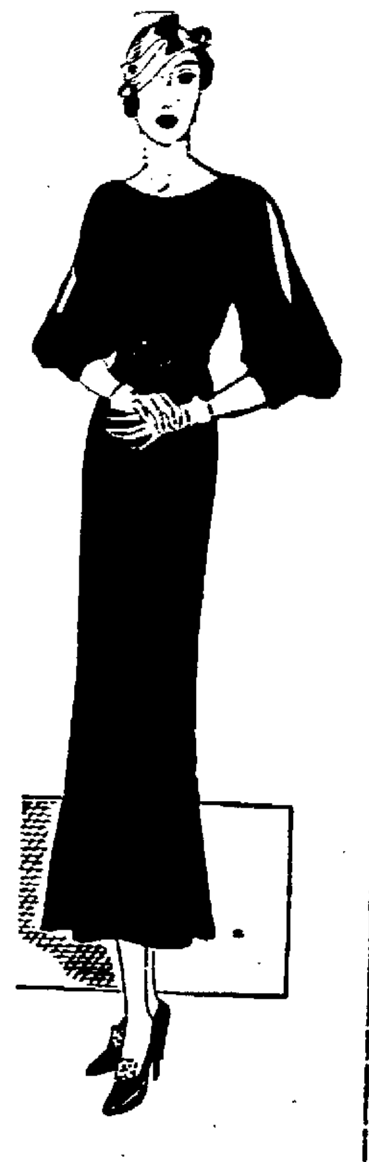
A sheer black frock, chiffon or otherwise, made with the arm revealed, is an extremely useful dress for any woman who goes out nights or who has friends in for contract.

There is a feeling against overdressing. It is never good form, but in this of all seasons, it is inexcusable. Wear rich clothes if you like, but simple ones.

The approval of well-gowned women for dresses on which a limited amount of trimming is used must be reported. Sometimes the trimming takes the form of metal or other embroidery, sometimes braid, or some old-fashioned arrangement of ribbon. Any and all of these trimmings are effective as an outline to the neckline or to graceful shoulders or yokes.

Touching metal or touching wood, both bring good luck to the woman wishing to be smart. Buttons are made of either or both, and so are other ornaments—pins, clips, and so on. Beads are used with considerable restraint.

Flowers are accepted as part of the evening regalia and, what is even more exciting, are being used on hats. At the moment, the gardenia is the favorite. "Come spring," hats promise to be pretty again—not just smart, but really pretty.



Copyright, 1933, by Fairchild

This dress, formal in type, is fashioned of black rough crepe. The sleeves, which are slashed from the shoulder, and the belt are treated with angel skin embroideries that make a pleasant dull contrast.

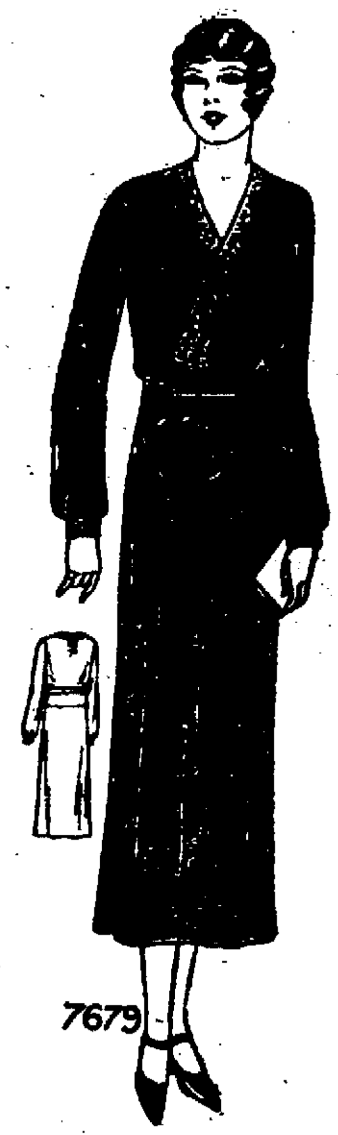
OUR DAILY PATTERN.



A Stylish Model (For the Larger Woman).

7679. Printed crepe was used for this distinctive style. Lace banding supplies the trimming. Velvet or crepe satin is also suggested with chiffon, or crepe, or the reverse side of the satin for contrast. The surplice lines of the waist and the pleasing shaping on the skirt are slenderizing and becoming. Tucks create fulness on the waist at shoulders and neck. The sleeve is a popular style, with soft fulness gathered above a band cuff.

Designed in 8 sizes: 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52 inches bust measure. Size 46 will require 4⅝ yards of 39 inch material if made in monotone. If made as illustrated in the large view, 4⅛ yards of 39 inch printed crepe and 1¼ yard of 9 inch lace or lace banding will be required. The width of the Dress at the lower edge is 1¾ yard.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Kingston, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

WHEN spring invades the Hollywood scene, clever actresses change their moods and their costumes to play the new season. Adrienne Ames assures herself an enthusiastic reception as she catches the light, bright spirit of spring, wearing a filmy frock of yellow corded organdie. This is an interesting feminine contrast to Marlene Dietrich's mannish spring costume.

Here's the secret of

A sunny disposition

LOOK around at your friends. Isn't it a fact that those who are happy and cheerful are folks who enjoy good health? The two go together.

Poor health reflects itself in your manner to other people. Too often, lack of personality can be traced to constipation. It may cause loss of appetite and energy. Yet it can be overcome by eating a delicious cereal.

Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to further aid regularity. The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. ALL-BRAN also contains twice as much blood-building iron as an equal weight of beef-liver.

Special cooking, flavoring and krumbling processes make Kellogg's ALL-BRAN finer, softer, more palatable. You will find it far more pleasant to enjoy a cereal in place of taking patent medicines. So much wiser too.

Two tablespoonfuls daily of ALL-BRAN will overcome most types of constipation. If not relieved this way, see your doctor. At all grocers, in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

"When you're healthy, you're happy"

"How you feel — and how well you look — depends largely upon the food you eat. Be sure your diet is balanced — with sufficient 'bulk' to promote regularity." H. K. Kellogg

Kingston: "Horse Feathers." The mad Marx brothers get together again in this crazy talkie, and their antics will have most any audience hanging on the edge of their seats before the final flicker. There is a slight plot to this one, but not enough to spoil the show from being completely successful. Groucho Marx is a college professor whose son is in love with the college widow. So Groucho sets out to break up the romance only to fall in love himself. This show is fast, hysterical entertainment, completely lacking in sense, but thoroughly entertaining. Thelma Todd is also in the cast.

Orpheum: "Rockabye" and "Tex Takes a Holiday." An unusually good double feature attraction, the first a story of mother love and devotion, starring Constance Bennett with a fine supporting cast that includes Joel McCrea and Paul Lukas. The second attraction, a western yarn, is filmed in multicolor, and it features Wallace MacDonald and Virginia Browne Faire.

Broadway: "70,000 Witnesses." A different kind of football story in which the star player on a great team races to a touchdown before 70,000 happy fans only to meet death by murder at the goal line. How he was murdered, and the reasons for his death are solved after much excitement and thrills. Johnny Mack Brown plays the part of the murdered football star, while Phillips Holmes is good as his roommate, wrongly accused of the murder. Charles Ruggles is one of the picture's brightest spots as a slightly plastered reporter. Dorothy Jorden is the girl in the story.

Tomorrow.

Kingston: "Love Me Tonight". Gay Maurice Chevalier is the star of this entertaining romance, and his acting is so good and the play is so well adapted to his talents that the picture is entirely his from beginning to end. The show is musical comedy, with some grand songs and some superb scenery and effects. The plot concerns a lowly tailor who falls in love and wins a princess. To add comedy relief to the picture, Charles Ruggles and Charles Butterworth contribute some of the most laughable antics that the screen has seen in some time. Beautiful Jeanette MacDonald is perfect as the princess, and she sings several songs in her lovely voice. All in all, this latest Chevalier offering is as good or better than any of his former screen ventures. Four star entertainment.

Orpheum: Same.

Broadway: "Madison Square Garden". Athletic contests, especially wrestling, boxing, and bike racing are glorified in this picture, a story of Madison Square Garden where champions are crowned and losers are heart broken. It's a panorama of one of America's biggest sports palaces, and before the end famous wrestling and boxing champions of yesterday are seen about the Garden. The story concerns a couple of prize fighters and how they climb the ladder to fame and the big money. Jack Oakie and Warren Hymer are the fighters, and William Collier, Sr. is their clever manager. Others in a large cast include William Boyd and Marian Nixon.

PILES

Go Quick—No Cutting—No Salves

If you think a surgical operation is the only way to get rid of itching, bleeding or protruding Piles, it's because you haven't heard of the harmless internal medicine discovered by a prominent western physician.

After years of study, Dr. J. S. Leonhardt found the cause of Piles to be internal—congestion of blood in the lower bowel—the hemorrhoidal veins flabby; the bowel walls weak; the parts almost dead. Right away the doctor set to work to find a real internal remedy. He succeeded, and after prescribing it for 1000 patients, with success in over 900 cases, he named his prescription HEM-ROID.

The doctor wants every Pile sufferer to benefit by his discovery, and so there will be no doubting or delay. McBride Drug Stores and druggists everywhere are authorized to sell HEM-ROID with guarantee of money-back if it does not end Piles in any form.

So why waste time on external treatments or think of an operation when HEM-ROID tablets are guaranteed.

HOW TO SUPPORT A WIFE LESSON FOR PRINCE

Stockholm, (P)—The time-honored question as to whether two can live as cheaply as one may be applied to Swedish royalty.

E. Wigforss, finance minister, declined to approve an additional allowance of 100,000 kroner (about $20,000) to Prince Gustaf Adolf, who was married last October to Princess Sibylle of Germany.

The 26-year-old prince already had 90,000 kroner a year but his marriage, it is claimed, doubled his expenses.

The total outlay for the royal family is reduced in the Wigforss budget by $16,000 through cutting household expenses at the castle.

AMERICAN FAMILY HELPS TO RESTORE NORMAN FORTRESS

Les Andelys, France (AP)—The Chateau Gaillard, once defended by Richard The Lion-Hearted and which dominates the Seine countryside hereabouts, may soon regain its mediaeval splendor.

The large family of Gaylords in America and England who can trace kinship with the Gaillards still living in this part of Normandy are interested in the project.

So highly did "Lion Heart" prize the old castle that chroniclers of his time quoted him as saying:

"I would defend it though its walls were made of butter."

The citadel used to be the theme of many a painting and etching. Over the protests of art lovers a lime kiln was established at the very foot of the chateau.

But lime slaking grew slack along with other business and the owner of the plant now is willing to sell.

ITALY'S BARBER SHOPS TRY MONTHLY PAYMENT PLAN

Rome (AP)—Italian barbers are offering a monthly subscription arrangement whereby they keep a customer's chin shaved and hair cut from one end of the year to the other.

The customer pays a certain amount each month and gets a daily shave and a fortnightly haircut. It works down to 8 cents a shave and 20 cents a haircut.

Italians usually shave in the evening because they prefer to appear at their best for social rather than for business life. They rinse their own faces. There are no hot towels.

When the shave is over the barber rubs their faces with an antiseptic caustic cube which burns sharply.

Barbers expect big tips on Christmas, Easter and mid-August, but five cents is about the highest any other time.

SWISS LAY UP AUTOS: HIGH INSURANCE CAUSE

Berne. (AP)—Thousands of automobiles have been retired in Switzerland owing to a new law which raises the compulsory insurance for third party risks to about $20,000.

In the canton of Geneva alone 4,000 machines, or one in three, have been laid up, involving a loss in taxes of $120,000 yearly.

Finns To Fish For Treasure.

Helsingfors, (AP)—An expedition has been organized here to fish next summer for 14 barrels of gold estimatedly worth $10,000,000 and supposed to have gone down in the Gulf of Finland when a Russian warship foundered in 1720. The actual location of the treasure has not been disclosed.

Munich Church In Old Colors.

Munich, Germany, (AP)—Restoration of the original 15th century decorations in the famous "Frauenkirche," or "Church of Our Lady" here, reveals grey ceilings, yellow pillars, red altars and green shrines. The church was reopened with a pontifical Mass by Cardinal von Faulhaber.

BLACKS GROW WEALTHY WHERE WHITES FAILED

Canberra. (AP)—Aboriginals have flocked to the Granites—the deserted goldfields in Central Australia—and are eagerly retrieving huts, tin cans, shovels, picks and other junk.

But what is more exciting is the fact that the white men sank wonderful wells in this thirsty land.

Four months ago there was a grand rush to the Granites when a rich reef, said to be six miles long, was reported discovered. But the tide receded when the field proved worthless.

An Iceless "Icebox" Can Be Easily Made at Home

An efficient refrigerating box to be used without ice can be constructed of a small quantity of lumber, screen wire, burlap and pans. In places where ice is not available it is quite efficient. The construction is simple, the framework of the box being constructed of small wood, such as 1 x 2 pine. The sides were left open, being covered only with screen wire, but the top is made of solid wood. One side is used for a door. On the top of the refrigerator a pan of water is placed.

Four strips of burlap are required, of sufficient length to reach from the pan of water on top to another pan kept under the refrigerator. Their strips are soaked in water and then placed in position. The box is located in a position where it is in the path of a breeze, and the evaporation of the water follows, the evaporating action serving to chill the interior of the box. —Washington Star.

Hearing a Pin Drop

"You could hear a pin drop."

I wonder how many people know the accepted origin of this phrase. I learned it quite by accident, while talking with an official at Lloyd's. Many years ago, I was told, it was customary to hold ship auctions at Lloyd's Coffee house on Tower Hill. Instead of a hammer, a pin was thrust into a lighted candle about an inch from the top; and the last bid made before the pin fell out of the melting tallow was accepted.

When this critical stage in the "candle auctions"—as they were then called—was reached, a death-like calm came over the assembly, to enable those present "to hear the pin drop."—London Post.

Pumpkin-Headed Brides

"Your story about the innocent young bride who thought the grocer had cheated her because he sent her a hollow pumpkin, reminds me," writes W. B. C., "of that other young bride who had received from her husband's aunt in Maine a nice large pumpkin with the aunt's recipe for making old-fashioned pumpkin pie. 'It was lovely for her to send it, dear,' said the bride appreciatively, 'but I'm afraid I can't do anything with it.'

"'Why not?' asked her husband.

"'Why, the recipe reads: "First, boil the pumpkin," and you know I haven't a pot in the house that will hold that enormous thing'"—Boston Transcript.

Mink Prejudice Justified

"The prejudice against minks held by trappers appears only too well founded," says Dr. Ned Dearborn in "Food of Fur Bearing Animals in Michigan." "Unquestionably, minks kill many muskrats in winter when other warm-blooded animals are more difficult to find," he says. The mink burrows into their houses, occupies their beds, and lies in wait to kill them. An entire colony of muskrats may be destroyed or routed by a pair of these freebooters.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—The stock market was jerky and uncertain today.

The list showed some signs of meeting support, as prices approached the lower levels of the trading range of the past four months, but a number of the utilities and miscellaneous industrials were again in supply, and rails barely held their own.

Among stocks off a point or two were North American, Consolidated Gas, Public Service of N. J., American Telephone, American Can, American Tobacco B, National Biscuit, Goodyear and Union Pacific. The steel stocks were again steady, and bullish activity continued in gold mining issues and New York tractions. Homestake, McIntyre Porcupine and Interboro Rapid Transit gained a point or so.

The market was dull, and seemed almost wholly a professional trading affair.

While the rails held up better than most groups, indications that the weekly freight car loadings report would show a substantial decline tended to put a damper on bullishness in that group. Nevertheless, net operating revenues as reported for December are showing a substantial gain over the like month of the previous year. The recent statement by Lenor F. Loree that the last half of the year should see a decided change for the better in the carrier situation appears to have stimulated some public interest in the rail group.

Selling of public utilities such as Consolidated Gas was accompanied by discussions in brokerage quarters of possible effects of agitation for rate reductions, particularly upon future dividend policy, the New York tractions were bid up, together with renewal of the old talk of a possible fare increase, although no tangible developments in that direction could be found.

SEE HOW AN EMBRYO GROWS WITHIN EGG

Students Watch All Stages of Development.

Visitors to the incubation school at the New York State College of Agriculture see how an embryo develops in all of the stages of hatching. This is made possible by a new method developed by Prof. Alexis L. Romanoff of the Cornell university experiment station.

Scientists attempted to study the growth of embryos as early as 1720 when Beguelin observed the germinal disk through a hole in the shell at the side or blunt end of the egg. The opening was covered with a piece of shell from another egg. In 1887 Gerlach was able to study the embryo up to the fifth day and occasionally to the eighth day. Byerly had about the same success in 1926.

At Cornell the development of the embryo has been observed from the fresh egg up to the normal hatching. The egg is first washed in alcohol and a hole is made about an inch in diameter at the blunt end of the egg by removing the shell and membranes. The opened egg is set on an indented glass to hold it upright and is covered with a sterilized beaker and placed in the incubator.

The experimenters found the greatest mortality from the second to the fourth day, when the heart begins to function. Eggs opened after one week of incubation had the least mortality and could be watched throughout the hatching process.

How Can Poultry Men Stay in the Business?

Now that commercial poultry production is furnishing a source of livelihood for many citizens, new problems are arising in the enterprise and many growers are wondering how they can continue in business.

"Some poultry men are inclined to push their birds to the limit of egg and flesh production. These men are using the facts developed by science to extract the final cent of profit from their birds, and in doing so there is a danger that some of the vitality is being sapped from poultry," says Roy S. Dearstyne, head of the poultry department at North Carolina State college. "Now, alert poultry men are seeing their flocks become more susceptible to troubles not heretofore a menace to the industry. All of this means that poultry men must give greater care to their feeding, breeding and other factors which will help to build up the stamina of the individual flocks."

In planning work for the new poultry year, Mr. Dearstyne believes it imperative to pay more attention to breeding.

Run Full Capacity

If opinion of state poultry workers and investigators is a safe guide there should be no hesitation about raising as many chicks as your equipment permits in 1933.

The outlook is favorable for reasonable profits at present and probable prices. As a general proposition, year after year, poultry raising is a profitable business under careful management. When market prices are comparatively low one must practice greater economy in management and be satisfied with smaller profits than in the years of high prices. Those who really make money on poultry are those who stick to it year after year with an eye always on all the factors that contribute to loss and gain.—Nebraska Farmer.

Feather-Eating Habit Cure

Feather plucking is a bad habit among fowls and often a difficult one to cure. In most cases it is due to the bird being kept in a small space and not having sufficient exercise, but can often be traced to lack of proper green food. Scattering the grain in litter will give the hens exercise and placing cabbage or other vegetable leaves upon the end of a string about 30 inches from the ground, so that the birds will have to jump for it, will help take their minds off the bad habit of feather eating.

Poultry Gleanings

The high moisture content of vegetable greens is a big factor in their value to poultry.

* * *

Egg prices and feed prices, when compared, remind poultrymen that only the best ration is profitable.

* * *

Egg production in commercial poultry flocks in Massachusetts has increased 35 per cent in the last 20 years.

* * *

Eggs generally weigh from 23 to 25 ounces to the dozen, but may vary from 18 to 32 ounces.

* * *

A pullet can withstand a range in temperature from nearly zero to about 100 degrees Fahrenheit.

* * *

Blindness in chickens, whether old or young, may be due to an accident; it may be due to a severe case of roup in the flock; it may be due to an infestation of worms, or it may be due to a case of paralysis.

When Deer Shows Age

Around the fifteenth year, the average deer shows signs of aging. It is not so alert, nor so active, and the antlers begin to deteriorate. Successive pairs are shorter. They lack full sweep and as the animal grows very old, the antlers fall to match. Deterioration may progress to the state where nothing but a long prong grows from one side.

"Rochester Plan" Founder Dead

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 3 (AP).—Libanus M. Todd, author of the "Rochester Plan" for relieving unemployment died last night. He was 70.

Todd's plan was to stimulate employment locally by urging property owners to undertake necessary improvements to their property. Many Rochester citizens pledged themselves to make specified improvements, and the plan was adopted in many other cities.

One of the founders of the Todd Company, Mr. Todd, was inventor in 1899 of the first protectograph, a check writing machine, which was the basis of the company's business. Aided by his brother, George W., Mr. Todd built a world-wide business on his invention and other devices designed to prevent forgery and tampering with business papers.

Last Slot Machine Case Disposed Of

Last summer agents working under orders from the district attorney's office gathered considerable evidence in Kingston which resulted in a number of raids being staged and slot machines seized. The last of the cases to be disposed of was that of William Mooney, who entered a plea of guilty and was fined $5. Similar fines had previously been imposed upon six other persons, whose cases had dragged along in police court since last August.

Chromium

Chromium has been known as a chemical element since about 1800, when it was discovered by a metallurgist named Vauquelin. Ore was found in Maryland and Pennsylvania in 1827. While chromium had been used as an alloy with steel on a considerable scale prior to that time, its first employment in a large way is said to have been in the construction of the Eads Mississippi river bridge at St. Louis, which was completed in 1874 and is still in constant use.

Three Bears and Goldilocks

By MARY CARR

WNU Service

ONCE upon a time there were three bears—a great big bear, a middle-sized bear and a little bear. . . .

The great big bear was John Holman. He was twenty-four, and he was an exceedingly attractive young man. He was a bear. Barbara said so.

The middle-sized bear was Hollis Holman. He was fifty-five, and an exceedingly attractive middle-aged man. But he was a bear—Barbara said he was.

The little bear was Darius Holman. He was seventy-nine, and he was a most lovable old man. Barbara said he was. But she also said he was a bear. And Barbara knew.

Barbara was the Goldilocks of this story, and she lived in the house of the three bears. She had recently come there to live, as the wife of the great big bear. Now, on a soft June morning, she sat at breakfast looking most tantalizingly attractive.

"You're just bears, all of you," said Barbara. "And I'm not going to pay a bit of attention to what any of you say. I'm going to take John's car, and father Hollis' raincoat, because I haven't any and I might have to get out, and grandfather Darius' money, and I'm going right straight over that mountain all by myself, no matter what you think. Give me ten dollars, grandfather, will you, because John's so cross I don't like to ask him for any."

Grandfather Holman chuckled as he reached for his wallet. "I think you're a stubborn young lady, Barbara," he said, "but as you'd go whether I helped you out or not, why here it is." He took out a twenty-dollar bill and handed it to his grandson's wife.

"I wish you wouldn't, Goldilocks," said young John. "It'll be skiddy as the dickens on those high hills. Why can't you telephone—send 'em a check and telephone you can't come?"

"It isn't just the money they want—though grandfather was a darling to give me all this. But it's that they want me, too. I've got to go."

In the end both Jim and Hollis Holman gave money to Barbara for Harvest Home day at her pet charity, the Children's hospital at Brompton.

"But be careful," cautioned her husband as he and his father got into his car to drive to business. "What time'll you be home?"

"Oh, by five o'clock, anyway. Don't worry, John. I'll be careful."

When John and his father got home that night from work they entered the warm, lighted house with anticipation. A howling storm raged outside.

"Here's grandfather," called John from the living room. "So you won't have to take the car down to meet the bus for him. Too bad, grandfather, we didn't get home earlier to meet you. Slow traveling, though, in this weather. Where's Goldilocks?"

"I don't know," said the old man. "I just got in three minutes ago—and stopped here to warm my bones on the way upstairs."

John dashed upstairs. Their room was empty. And just at that moment his father came running breathlessly in from the garage. "Just ran the car in," he said, "to get it out of the storm. Goldilocks' car isn't there."

"I know," said John. Grandfather Darius joined them in the hall. The three men looked at each other.

"Those slippery roads," said Darius.

"What'll we do?" demanded John.

"I'll telephone the hospital," said Hollis.

"I'll go upstairs and get my raincoat on," said John—"so if I have to drive over that way, you know—"

Hollis had trouble with the telephone. But finally he was told that the wires to Brompton were down.

"Well," John said—"guess I'll have to go over to Brompton—over the road she took."

"I'm going too," said grandfather Holman. "I'm not going to sit home here and wonder what's happening."

And grandfather Holman started upstairs. "I'm going to get my winter overcoat," he said. "It's in a moth bag in my closet."

A moment later a hoarse shout came from upstairs. "Holman! John!" he called. "Come here."

When John and Holman precipitately answered his hurried call they tiptoed behind him, at the behest of the finger held warningly over his lips, into the guest room. In the beam of the flashlight with which the old man had armed himself to help in the search of Barbara they saw her—Goldilocks curled up on grandfather Holman's bed, under a warm comforter.

"Oh—" said Goldilocks, sleepily, opening starry eyes. "Why, what's the matter? Why the fancy light? What time is it?"

Goldilocks stretched luxuriously and then jumped nimbly to her feet. "Sorry, grandfather," she said. "It's like 'Goldilocks getting caught by the three bears. You see, I was cold, and this northeaster made our room like a barn, so I came in here to lie down. You weren't worried, were you?"

"But where's your car?" asked her father-in-law.

"Yours, you mean, don't you dear?" laughed Barbara. "I ran off the road—but it was right down in the village. So the garage man there brought me home and he's hauled the car to his garage to fix a flat—guess that's what made me run off the road. Well, come on, Three Bears, and let's get ready for dinner."

MEETING OF KAPPA ZETA CLUB AT STONE RIDGE

On Thursday evening the regular meeting of the Kappa Zeta Club was held at the Stone Ridge Grange Hall with Robert J. Service, county probation officer, as the guest speaker. The meeting was opened by Arthur Kurtz of New Paltz, president of the club.

The benefit show and dance which the club is staging on February 23 at the New Paltz High School Auditorium, was discussed at some length and final arrangements were made. The show is being put on jointly by the Kappa Zeta and Holstein clubs and the proceeds will be divided equally between the two clubs. The show will consist of eight separate acts. Some will consist of talent chosen from the membership of the clubs and some will be professional talent. Paul Zucca and his orchestra will provide the music for both the show and the dancing which will follow. Tickets may be secured from any member of either club.

The club usually holds a banquet in place of the March meeting, but this year a social will be held for club members and invited guests. The evening will be spent dancing, playing cards and other features to be arranged by a special committee.

The meeting was turned over to Albert Kurdt, chairman of the program committee. He in turn presented Mr. Service, the speaker of the evening. Mr. Service gave a very interesting talk in regard to the probationary system, going into some detail as to how it operates and citing examples of the results obtained. He explained how many youths are often the victim of circumstances and how many of them are changed into useful citizens by being given a little encouragement and guidance, without formal arrest and prosecution. He asked the members to cooperate if they were ever approached to help in acting as a big brother to some boy or other person on probation. He also pointed out our debt to the community for the education, police protection and other services we receive and often do not appreciate. Those present were very much interested in the talk and showed their appreciation by long and continued applause.

After the program refreshments were enjoyed. Apple pie, ice cream and coffee were served by members of the club.

FRANCIS BROWN HAD HIS HANDS BURNED THURSDAY.

A curtain hung between the doorway of two rooms in the residence of Mrs. Anna Wood at 45 Meadow street, caught fire on Thursday afternoon, and an alarm of fire was turned in from Box 45. Francis Brown, 16, of 14 East Union street, was badly burned about the hands in tearing down the burning curtain. He had his burns dressed at the Kingston Hospital. The damage by fire was slight.

BASKETS and BANKBOARDS

(This is the last of a series of eight basketball articles by Forrest C. Allen, director of athletics at the University of Kansas and noted authority on the game.)

By FORREST C. (PHOG) ALLEN
(Written For The Associated Press)

Lawrence, Kas. (AP).—Many basket ball coaches have a deep seated yearning for material which is at least six feet tall, with the center towering from four to six inches over the other "bix sixes."

Which brings me to the question: are small men still valuable under the new basket ball rules?

Emphatically, yes!

For tip off plays and basket rebound work the big, tall man still excels. He also is better on the zone defense, but in the man-to-man style of play and in screen and pick off plays the little man is much the better.

The much used quick break after recovery of the ball from the defensive bank board utilizes the small, speedy man in an emphatic fashion.

Ed Wachter, the Harvard coach, cites Tommy Cullen, Jr., the Dartmouth flash of 10 years ago, and Albie Booth, Yale's "little, big man," as two of the greatest of the undersized court luminaries to make basket ball's hall of fame.

In the Big Ten, the Big Six, the Southwest and the Pacific Coast Conferences big, tall, rangy men still have the call over the little fellows.

Little Fellows Valuable

However, with the new rules in force, two small, clever men can be used very handily in the basket ball combination. Indeed, there are coaches who discard some of their taller men, preferring to use the big-little man combination, thereby utilizing the quick cuts and screens which are so essential to their game.

They also use clever publicity strategy, capitalizing pseudo-sympathy by complaining to the public that their team is undersized, when as a matter of fact these small men actually are desired.

So long as screen plays and quick cuts are good, good little men will be at a premium. Big men cannot stand the running necessary in the proper execution of this strenuous type of play.

Teach Them To Obey

We hear very little of the stall game this season. Occasionally, however, we read where some of the die-hard coaches who dislike the new ten-second rule attempt to flout the rules by instructing their players to withhold the ball from play after the offense has crossed the center court line. The spectators paid for action and that is what they should have.

Dr. Edward J. "Eddie" O'Brien, Boston surgeon and veteran football referee, told the football coaches assembled in New York that any crusade looking to the betterment of the game should start with the coaches themselves.

"Frequently," he said, "football officials come in contact with attempts to beat or evade the rules. Too often when a rule has been made, the greatest effort has been to find a way around it.

"Instead of teaching the boys to try smart plays or cheat the rules, teach them how to obey the rules. Your coaches' association can be the greatest power today for the game's good."

This is equally apropos of basket ball.

SPORT SLANTS

(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

Bill Tilden agrees with his professional tennis associate, Vincent Richards, that the U. S. A. will find it very difficult indeed to dislodge the Davis Cup from the French this year, but for a different reason.

Where Richards believes the present policy of furnishing year-round activity for Vines, Allison, Van Ryn and other American aces will take the edge off their game by summer, Tilden sticks to an old guardsman's belief that the real obstacle to our success at Paris will be Henri Cochet.

Notwithstanding Cochet's two defeats by Vines, at Auteuil and Forest Hills, and the Frenchman's subsequent displacement as world No. 1 player by the American champion, Tilden thinks it will be a different story when they meet again this year. Big Bill says Cochet underestimated Vines on both occasions he was beaten last year but will not repeat this mistake.

There were, of course, extenuating circumstances both times Vines licked the little French stylist. The American's Davis Cup victory came after Jean Borotra had beaten Wilmer Allison in the singles for the deciding point. At Forest Hills, Cochet was obliged to battle Vines shortly after finishing the fifth set of his semi-final with Allison. He was tired and a bit disgruntled.

On that afternoon, however, Cochet hardly would have been a match for Vines under any circumstances. Henri admitted this, even though he felt he was entitled to "squawk" about the arrangements.

Our boys have now missed at least two good chances to recover the Davis Cup. Even with the French dynasty slipping, they have no reason to be over-confident. They will do well to concentrate their resources for the big campaign and pay no attention to the ballyhoo.

They Suspected It

"Professional baseball" writes Dr. Jesse F. Steiner of the University of Washington, one of the investigators of the President's Research Committee on Social Trends, "is already showing the effect of growing competition with other sports and amusements.

This, of course, is not news to the magnates struggling to find ways and means of keeping out of the red in these times.

Dr. Steiner's conclusions are based on the decade up to and including 1930, at which time he says "the curve of attendance is still mounting upward." It has dipped downward for the major leagues since then, while the minor leagues have continued to show a falling off which began in 1928.

Didn't Keep Pace

Dr. Steiner makes the point that even during the boom decade professional baseball's attendance gains did not keep pace with the growth of population.

Thus the major league attendance for 1930, amounting to 10,000,000, was an increase of only 1,000,000 over the figures for 1920 or 11.5 per cent. Population in the eleven major league cities increased 20.5 per cent during the same period.

Princeton to Cut Sports Budget

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 3 (AP).—The decline in football revenues will force a drastic reduction in the sports budget for next year, the Princeton Athletic Association announces.

The financial report for the 1931-32 academic year, ending last June, showed a decline of 50 per cent in football profits and a total sports deficit of $98,952.96. The deficit the previous year had amounted to $33,488.98, bringing the aggregate deficit to $132,441.94.

Profit from football in the 1931-32 academic year amounted to $84,762.48, just about half the revenue of the previous year and less than a third of the 1929-30 total of $259,574.61.

Track, crew, baseball, basketball, hockey and minor sports operated at an aggregate loss of $91,000 during 1931-32.

Kiting Checks

The practice of two persons exchanging checks and each depositing the other's check, when neither has money to make his check good, was named by the witty Lord Norbury a century ago. He said: "In England you raise a wind to fly a kite, but in Ireland we fly kites to raise the wind." Thereafter such a check was known as a "kite."

Featured scorers were Post for the Happiness Boys with 10 points and Teetsell for the Aces with the same tally.

Days of Chaperonage at Parties Are Gone Forever

Think of the days when rows of so-called dowagers, many of them perhaps not yet past the early forties, were obliged to sit for hours at dances on more or less uncomfortable chairs, smiling heroically through agonies of weariness and boredom!

Incredible as it may now seem, there actually was a period when fathers went to dances with their daughters, waiting patiently for hours, until at last it was time to escort the dear girls home.

Some elderly persons can remember the old-fashioned picnics and beach parties, when chaperons of both sexes uncomplainingly provided nourishment for hordes of famished mosquitoes, while their charges swiftly vanished to indulge in the pastime then known as "twosing," and now more accurately termed "petting."

The number of parents martyred by the supposed obligations of a chaperonage which seldom, if ever, restrained their offspring from doing precisely as they pleased is as incalculable as the sands of the sea.—North American Review.

About Weathercocks

The use of weather vanes for indicating the direction of the wind is of very early origin. The instruments used upon castles and towers in the olden days were in the form of a banner, but the use of the cock and the name of weathercock came about in this way. On ecclesiastical buildings, the vane was given a symbolic significance. The crosspiece of the instrument was surmounted by a ball to symbolize the redemption of the world by the cross of Christ, and the cock was placed upon the cross in allusion to the redemption of Saint Peter. Thus the beholders were reminded of the importance of the duties of repentance and Christian faith. Apart from the symbolism of the cock, its large tail is well adapted to turn with the wind, and its form admirable for the purpose for which the vane is intended.

Grenfell Missions

The Grenfell Missions in Labrador and Newfoundland, administered by the International Grenfell association, were founded by Sir Wilfred Grenfell in 1892 to meet the great need for hospitals, nursing stations and other services for fishermen and their families on these coasts. The mission headquarters is at St. Anthony, Newfoundland, where Doctor Grenfell lives and where he has established an orphanage. His hospital steamship, the Strathcona II, cruises annually along these coasts and he goes ashore to visit his hospitals, schools, nursing stations, orphanages, co-operative stores, industrial plants, etc.

Lighthouse in Use 88 Years

Intended, when built, to last 70 years, Galle Lighthouse, known to every seaman who has passed the coast of Ceylon, has served 88 years and is expected to continue at least another decade. Lighthouses were practically unknown on the busier channels leading to the Western ocean, the North sea and the Mediterranean when the one at Galle, then the chief port of Ceylon, was built, long before the days of the Suez canal.

Whittier of Old School Poets

John Greenleaf Whittier, the Quaker poet of Haverhill, was born in 1807, and was a member of the famous New England school of writers. The kindly Whittier lived to be almost the last of his illustrious contemporaries—Emerson, Hawthorne, Holmes, Longfellow, Lowell, and all the rest.

How I Broke Into The Movies

Copyright by Nat C. Bloomer

By NANCY CARROLL

I REALLY kicked my way into the movies—both kinds of kicks, the kind you register to music, and the kind you register without music.

When I was a child, I had plenty of opportunity to practice as there were twelve children in our family. One day my sister and I heard that one of the Loew theaters on the East side in New York was having a dancing contest for local talent. We decided to enter and try our luck as we both could kick over our heads then.

When we reached the theater, we confessed that we were from the West side of the city, but they let us enter anyway. Much to our surprise, for we were a little nervous at our first attempts before the footlights of a big theater—we won.

Our first big show after this was the "Passing Show of 1923." Here I did a specialty number, but in one of the numbers I failed to kick as I had to hang from a chandelier. Within four weeks I was offered the leading role, opposite James Hall.

The show made ready to go on the road, and so did I, but my mother, who opposed my being on the stage, refused to let me go on the road. So I left this company and went into "Topics of 1923." Later I did a specialty number with the "Passing Show 1924," and after that I had a prominent part in "Mayflowers," kicking all the time, but to music, of course.

Then I had a chance to come West. I did not kick at that, though. My first part on the west coast was with "Nancy." In my next two shows, I had plenty of kicks for they were the "Music Box Revue" with Lupino Lane and the "Music Box" with Fannie Brice.

After that I starred in "Loose Ankles," which toured the Pacific coast. Then came the leading role in "Chicago," which was produced in Los Angeles.

Ever since I first arrived on the west coast, I had wanted to go into pictures. I finally submitted some tests to William Fox and was given the secondary lead in "Ladies Must Dress."

Nancy Carroll.

After I made that picture, I called at the Paramount studio in Hollywood one noon to keep a luncheon appointment with a friend of mine employed there. The guardian at the door refused to let me in. I had my appointment and I meant to keep it. I didn't see why he should not let me in, so I registered a big kick and without music, too. You see, I'm Irish and have red hair, too, so that all helped, I guess.

Anyway, when I was in the middle of the big argument, I was interrupted by Miss Anne Nichols, author of "Able's Irish Rose." She had been passing through the foyer and stopped to see what the excitement was about. Well, I did get past that door guardian in the end, only I did not go to meet my friend. I went with Miss Nichols into her office.

She told me that I was just the type for Rosemary in her play which was to be filmed.

So you see, I did kick my way into the movies. My musical show kicks helped me to get into drama and that helped me into the movies. Plus, the musicaless kick, last of all.

Some Old Rocks

The Highlanders of the western coasts of Scotland have a short proverb: "New boat—old rocks." Do not suppose that as you in your turn essay the dangerous voyage of life you can afford to disregard the long experience of mankind. Be sure that, as Coleridge said, "Not without celestial observation can ever terrestrial charts be accurately constructed."—Henley Henson.

Scots War on Thistle

War on the national flower and emblem of Scotland is being waged in that country. The thistle has been so prolific this year that it is becoming a menace to farmers, especially along the border. Small prizes were offered to school children who brought in the largest number of thistles, and one girl gathered 5,000 plants.

ONE TAXPAYER PLEASED BY HIS CITY TAX BILL

Kingston, N. Y., Feb. 3, 1933.
Kingston Daily Freeman,
Kingston, N. Y.
Mr. Editor:

I found the tax bill in the mail box this morning and I would like to express my thanks and appreciation to Mayor Carey for sending me a tax bill that I did not have to faint or have heart failure upon reading. When I consider that Kingston has passed through the hardest times it ever had or ever will have, I hope, and the astounding load the city had to assume, in work and home relief and charity, and in view of the fact that most of us were reassessed and lastly in comparing last year's tax bill with this year's, I think Mayor Carey deserves credit and appreciation for what I consider a year of splendid business administration of our city affairs. I wish our national affairs were as well managed as those of Kingston. Good work, good luck, and carry on Mr. Mayor.

Henson Denies He Set Fire To Valley Farm

ment and for the discharge of the defendant on the grounds that the prosecution had failed to make a case. Motion denied.

Came To Phoenicia in 1909.

Mr. Henson was then called to take the stand in his own defense. He said he had come to Phoenicia on June 20, 1909, and was 53 years old now. From 1909 to 1913 he was station agent and telegraph operator at Phoenicia and from 1914 until 1918 he was postmaster in the village. From 1918 to 1922 he was in New Haven with the New Haven Railroad. During all that time he had considered Phoenicia his home and had always voted there. In 1922 he came back to Phoenicia and became manager at Valley Farm for Mrs. Spence. She leased the place from Mr. Gormley until 1929. From 1922 to 1925 he worked for Mrs. Spence at Valley Farm. In 1925 he went to the Long Island Railroad and worked there until 1930 when he returned to Phoenicia and lived at the Gormley hotel in the village of Phoenicia, not the hotel at Valley Farm which Mr. Gormley also owned. He remained at the Gormley hotel as a boarder until April of 1931. At that time he rented a store near the railroad station and boarded across the road.

Henson said he knew the Gormley family well and after leaving the hotel he had taken meals at the Gormley hotel and at Mrs. Frederick's as well as at the place where he roomed near the station.

The last he recalled seeing Eugene Gormley was about a week prior to the fire and they were entirely friendly then. The last he had seen Ed Gormley was about a week prior to the fire when he went to Valley Farm with Ed. They were on the best of terms.

At Valley Farm he and Ed Gormley walked about the place and went out into the orchard where he pointed out certain varieties of apple trees with which he was familiar and they looked over the trees which were being pruned. After their walk about the orchard they went to the house and Ed took him into the cellar of the house.

Still Was Disconnected.

There he said Mr. Gormley showed him certain barrels. He said he did not know what was in the barrels and he was not permitted to tell his conversation with Mr. Gormley. In the cellar he said he also saw certain cans, coils and other equipment which was disconnected at the time. In all there were about 20 barrels. He was asked what the coils, etc., were, and the question was objected to. Then he was asked if he knew a still when he saw one and he said he did. He was then asked if the material was a disconnected still and he said yes. He said he and Gormley had some conversation about the barrels and the still but he was not permitted to tell the conversation. When he left Mr. Gormley they parted friends.

On the day of the fire he described his movements. He was at Woodland Valley Inn that day, having been asked by the proprietor to stay there. He said the proprietor had gone away for a few days and he understood he was to remain until the next Monday. Henson said he knew William Bohnert well but had never worked for him before. About 6 or 7 o'clock on the morning of March 27, he went to the Frederick house and saw Mrs. Frederick and asked Charles McGrath to come to the gas station to help. Mr. Frederick drove he and Charles back to the station. There was no conversation about Valley Farm and he denied Mrs. Frederick's statement that he had made threats at that time to burn Valley Farm. He also denied he had attempted to borrow a gun and said he was going to kill Mr. Gormley, but that before he killed him he would make him get down on his knees and beg for mercy. He also denied that two weeks prior he had threatened to burn Valley Farm. He said he had never made any such threats to anyone.

He remained at the gas station until about 5 o'clock that night. It was storming. He had had nothing to eat and he and Charles McGrath started out to go to the Frederick place to get something to eat. He said when he left he took no bottles of gasoline and that he had made no statements that he was going out to burn Valley Farm. He was going to see Mrs. Frederick and get something to eat and have her write some letters which he had neglected to write. He said his eyesight was very bad and he was unable to write.

Henson said he and Charles McGrath walked up the road to the Frederick place. When they reached the cottage the place was dark and Charles went in. Henson said he walked about 30 feet up the road past the cottage and then turned back and waited for Charles to return. Apparently no one was home for the place was dark. In about five or ten minutes Charles returned. They said nothing about there being no one home and they started back to the gas station. At no time was he near or on the Valley Farm premises that night.

Tells of Evening's Travel

Mr. Henson in his soft southern drawl told his story about the evening's travel in narrative form putting in a number of descriptive pictures. He said "we then journeyed back slowly, the storm was intense. It was not snowing very hard but it came down in whirls, making it difficult to see and going was hard, it was difficult to walk." Near the burying ground at the Jamieson place he said a car passed. From that point to the gas station he said he went ahead and Charles followed in single file. From that time when he went ahead he did not see Charles again and he entered the station ahead of Charles, who he supposed was following closely. He went into an adjoining room and went to sleep on the bed after removing his wet shoes.

"I saw nothing more until I was awakened at the Woodland Valley Inn by one of the boys who said the fire trucks had gone up the road." He said he took no bottles of gas when he went out.

It was about 10 o'clock when they got back to the gas station at Woodland Valley Inn. The Valley Farm he said was about a quarter of a mile further up the road from the Frederick cottage and he was never near the farm on the night of the fire. He denied that he had placed a bag saturated with gasoline under the house and set fire to it as the McGrath boy had previously testified.

Cross examined by District Attorney Murray the witness said the shoes produced were his. He said he had seen pint bottles like the exhibits in the gas station but there were so many bottles of that kind in the town of Shandaken that he could not identify the bottle as one he had seen at the station. "Why I could find a thousand bottles like that about those places", he said. He said he had seen quart bottles similar to the one filled with gas which was picked up in the Gormley lane the night of the fire. There were bottles similar to it at the Bohnert gas station.

He said a Mr. Wheeler was in charge of the gas station on March 27. He was left by Mr. Bohnert but had remained by a short time and he got the McGrath boy to come down and help at the station. He said he had not been hired to pump gas and did not know how.

Mr. Murray asked him if he thought he would be able to take a sprinkling can and pour gas into a quart or pint bottle and the witness said his eyesight was poor and he would not be able to if the mouth of the vessel was small.

Says Eyesight Was Poor

In reply to a question by Mr. Murray, Henson said his eyesight was very poor and he could scarcely see to write. Mr. Murray then asked Henson when he had last been in the district attorney's office and Henson said a few days ago.

"At whose request did you come?" asked Mr. Murray.

"At my request," replied Henson.

"And how was that request made, by a note written by you?" asked Mr. Murray.

"Yes," said Henson.

The note in Henson's handwriting was produced and he said he had written the note. He explained that since he had been confined to jail his eyesight had improved.

He was asked if he and Mrs. Frederick were friendly and he said he was. "Then why do you suppose she would come here and say you had threatened to burn Valley Farm?" asked the district attorney.

Henson said he had always been friendly and still was toward Mrs. Frederick but he supposed perhaps she was not so friendly now that she thought he had taken her son to Valley Farm and burned the building and gotten him in trouble.

Mr. Henson said that once in 1925 he and Gormley had had some words, not what could be considered anything serious. He remembered it. It was something about a check of "Dick" Gross which Mr. Gormley said had been cashed and the money not turned over by Henson. The affair was not a serious quarrel and they had parted friendly the next minute.

Henson said once on March 27 while he was on his way from the Frederick cottage he had fallen in the dugway.

He denied that he had lost the Phoenicia post office because of embezzlement of property. He said his books had been examined and found "O. K. or I would have been arrested," said the witness.

After Henson's story Mr. Canfield announced that he had intended to swear character witnesses and other witnesses Friday morning, but in order to expedite matters he would not delay the case and would rest on the testimony of the defendant.

There was no rebuttal on the part of The People and the case was closed.

At the opening of court this morning counsel summed up and Judge Traver charged the jury.

Court will reconvene Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Kiwanians Hear About Argentine

A romantic picture of a trip to several South American countries, with descriptions of such places as Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires, was verbally drawn for Kiwanians at their meeting in the Governor Clinton Hotel Thursday noon by a fellow member, Roger Loughran, who spent some time in South America as an attorney.

During the luncheon Paul Zucca reported in inimitable fashion on the district meeting of Kiwanis at Poughkeepsie Tuesday evening. Several members of the local club attended, and an enjoyable time was reported.

Lieutenant Governor of this Kiwanis District, Dr. Ernest K. Lee of Beacon, was a guest of the club, and spoke briefly on Kiwanis ideals and objectives for this year. He stressed especially Kiwanis education and extension.

Pearl Carey, chairman of the program committee, introduced Mr. Loughran.

The speaker opened his remarks with a description of his leave-taking, and the engine trouble that developed aboard his ship, which took 35 days to reach Buenos Aires instead of the usual 19 days. He described Barbados, the beauty of the scenery and the unusual features of the island, where his ship made an unscheduled stop to take on fresh water.

The beauties of the harbor at Rio de Janeiro, Sugar Loaf mountain, the city at night and the ride in a cable car were pictured to Kiwanians. The chocolate colored Platte River, Montevedio across the river from Buenos Aires were described.

The flat appearance of Buenos Aires from the sea was pictured. Buenos Aires is the largest Spanish city in the world, and the largest city south of the equator, explained Mr. Loughran. The buildings are very ornate, there are surface cars and the subway, all very clean in contrast to North American cities. There are many North American interests there, and few of the bigger businesses are run by natives. The speaker said that rents were about the same as in North America, that servants were cheaper, that there was an abundance of fresh meat which was the only kind of meat allowed in the city by law. Vegetables were about the same price as here but there were additional varieties.

In all the time Mr. Loughran was in Buenos Aires he saw only two people drunk on the public streets, one an American and the other an Englishman. There is no prohibition law, yet people seem to have the ability to drink in moderation, and little hard liquor is served, although it may be obtained.

The speaker explained that Buenos Aires was founded in 1535 and that Argentine adopted a constitution modeled upon that of the United States in 1853.

Argentine women, said the speaker, are subdued, wear dark and sombre clothing, and are seldom found attending the theatre or at an office deck. The men on the other hand, he explained, dress in great finery, wear perfume making them smell "like a breath of spring," and do not care to work.

He closed saying that after he became acquainted he enjoyed his stay in Buenos Aires very much but that he was glad to return to the United States when the opportunity offered.

President Howard St. John thanked the speaker, after which a closing song was rendered under the direction of Mr. Zucca, accompanied at the piano by Danny Bittner.

CHILD ARTIST WILL BE IN POUGHKEEPSIE

Baby Dorothy Louise, the sensational trapeze artist, will appear at the State Theatre in Poughkeepsie the coming week. Baby Dorothy Louise has the distinction of being the only baby trapeze artist in the United States. She is also an accomplished toe dancer. Two weeks ago she appeared at Hudson and received a well earned ovation. She is only six years old and holds her audiences spellbound as she performs her difficult feats on the flying rings. Her extraordinary act rates her as one of the most talented children on the stage today, and the ease and grace with which she renders her performances charms the young and old.
